TELEGRAMS.

Capture of the Upton Expedition by the Spaniards.

The Prisoners Taken Shot Immediately.

Denial of the Story of the Massacres in Roumania.

Rescue of the English Captives in Spanish Brigands.

CUBA.

Landing of the Upton Expedition—The Party Dispersed by Spaniards, and the War Material Captured—Execution of the Prisoners Taken.

HAVANA, June 5.—Captain-General DE ROAS telegraphs that the filibustering expedition, which sailed from New-York on the steamer George D. Upton, disembarked at Punta Brava, a few miles east of Nuevitas. They were attacked by a Spanish force, 100 strong, assisted by two gun-boats, and dispersed, losing ten killed, including Capt. HARRISON. Two were drowned and three taken prisoners. A steam launch, rubber rafts and the entire cargo of arms, ammunition and medicine, which had been landed, were captured with some correspondence. The Spanish naval commander telegraphs that the munitions captured consist of two tons of powder, over 100,000 cartridges and 1,700 rifles. CISNEROS, who commanded the expedition, had sailed on the Upton with the balance of her cargo for Colombia for the purpose of bringing back an expedition of 200 Colombians. The editor of the Voz de Cuba reports that the six tuns of gunpowder, 2,000 rifles, and the entire material of the Upton expedition fell into the hands of the troops, and that several prisoners taken were immediately executed. None of the dispatches state when the landing was effected.

WASHINGTON, June 5.—Friends of Cuba say that large quantities of arms have lately been dispatched to the insurgents, and that additional supplies will soon be sent thither.

EUROPE.

The Roumania Massacre Denied—No Intelligence of it in London or on the Continent.

LONDON, June 5.—Dispatches from the United States announce the receipt there of reports of massacres of Jews by Christians in Roumania. No advices have reached here on the subject, and the Continental news agencies deny that there have been any recent outrages upon the Jews of Roumania. A dispatch from Bucharest states that a riot occurred last week at Botushaly, a village in Moldavia, during a local election. It is described as an ordinary political disturbance which was quelled without the interference of the troops.

Release of the English Captives in Spain—Rejoicing in London—The Spanish Sovereignty.

MADRID, June 5.—The Englishmen captured by the Spanish brigands have been rescued, and have arrived at Gibraltar.....ESPARTERO has written a letter stating that he will refuse the crown even if the Cortes decree it to him.

LONDON, June 5.—There is much rejoicing here over the release of the English captives in Spain.

The Conspiracy Trials in France—Indictment of a Number of Those Implicated—A Violent Scene in the Roman Council.

PARIS, June 5.—The Chamber of Accusation of the High Court of Justice yesterday returned indictments against a number of persons, who have been finally remanded before the High Court for trial. Forty-seven are indicted for conspiracy against the safety of the State and the life of the Emperor, twenty-two for attempt against the safety of the State, three for pillage of private property in numbers and with open force, one for attempt to pillage, one for attempt to murder, one for assassination, two for inciting to an attempt against the life of the Emperor, and one for complicity in the same crime.

LONDON, June 5.—Advices from Rome report that a violent scene occurred in the Council last week between Bishop MAPEL, the well-known Gallican prelate, and Cardinal BILIO, during the discussion on the infallibility question. Bitter language was used and much excitement created among the fathers.

Yachting in England—American Relations with Prussia—An "Exposition" in Vienna.

LONDON, June 5.—The Channel match of the Royal Yacht Club took place on Saturday afternoon. The course was from the Nore to Dover. The American yachts declined to enter the race. The weather was fine and the water calm. Fifteen yachts started, and the three first arrived at Dover in the following order: E. BOUTCHER's cutter Fiona, 79 tons, at 10 P. M.; J. MULHOLLAND's schooner Egeria, 161 tons, at 10:10 P. M.; J. ASHBURY's schooner Cambria, 199 tons, at 12 P. M.

BERLIN, June 5.—Mr. BANCROFT, the American Minister, awaits fresh instructions from Washington before proceeding with the negotiations with the Prussian Government on the subject of the rights of naturalized citizens. He has left Berlin on a visit to the South German States.

VIENNA, June 5.—An Imperial decree has been promulgated, announcing that a Universal "Exposition" will be held in this capital in 1873.

Juvenile Burglars in Worcester, Mass.—Confession of One of the Criminals.

WORCESTER, June 5.—The jewelry store of B. STORY, in Main-street, was robbed of $9,000 worth of watches and jewelry, and $1,000 in money, on Friday night, by two boys, nineteen years of age, one of whom, ANDREW N. HEWETT, had formerly been clerk in the store. Suspicion rested upon him and he was arrested. He confessed having committed the robbery, and implicated a boy named FRANK WARD and a woman named MARY FAIRBANKS, who had assisted in concealing the plunder. They have been arrested. Every dollar of the money and the property have been found. Part of it was buried in Millbury, part in Grafton, and the remainder was found in the woman's trunk.

The Water Supply on Beacon Hill, Boston—Fire.

BOSTON, Mass., June 5.—The experiment of supplying the dwellings on Beacon Hill with Cochituate water, from the stand-pipe on Roxbury Highlands, was tried yesterday afternoon, and resulted in throwing a stream from the "frog-pond fountain" on the Common to the height of 300 feet. It is estimated that the new arrangement, when perfected, will give a supply of water to the dome of the State-house, and render the Beacon Hill reservoir unnecessary.....The building on the corner of Tremont-street and Pemberton-square, principally occupied as lawyers' offices, was damaged by fire last night to the extent of $2,000.....MICHAEL FLYNN suffered amputation of one of his legs, at the hospital, caused by jumping from the forward end of a horse-car last night.

THE INDIANS.

Attack on a Mail-Station—Two Soldiers Killed and a Sergeant Wounded—Savages on the War-Path.

CHICAGO, Ill., June 5.—News has been received at Hays City, Kansas, that about thirty-five Indians attacked Col. NELSON's mail-station on Bear Creek, between Camp Supply and Hays City, killing two private soldiers and wounding Sergt. MURRAY. A Mexican servant at Supply was also killed by the Indians, and sixty mules run off below that point. Mme. KERRY, an interpreter, came into Camp Supply, reporting that the Cheyennes and a large number of the Arapahoes had gone on the war-path.

REVENUE MARINE SERVICE.

Report of the Special Commission—Character and Distribution of the Vessels—The Personnel.

WASHINGTON, June 5.—The Secretary of the Treasury has communicated to the Senate a copy of the report of the special commission appointed to "consider and report upon the character of vessels best adapted for the revenue marine service, together with such views and conclusions upon other matters as might appear to them calculated to advance the interests of the service." They propose that the vessels be classified as follows: First-class steamers to be 250 tons; second-class steamers to be 180 tons; third-class steamers to be 120 tons, and under, schooners of 220 tons and under to rate as first-class vessels, to be distributed as follows: For Atlantic and Gulf coasts, twenty steamers and three sailing vessels; for the Pacific coast, three steamers and two schooners; for the lakes, four steamers; total, thirty-two. In view of the condition of some of the vessels, their want of uniformity for the performance of duty, and their unfitness for the service, the Commission recommend that the appropriation of $300,000 now on hand be used in the construction of five steamers—one first-class, and four second class. Six of the sailing vessels can be sold, as also five steamers which the new vessels would replace. The proceeds of the sale thus obtained can be used in the construction of more steamers, and the process continued as rapidly as the exigencies of the service or public policy will permit. The personnel of the service will be, if the recommendations are adopted, as follows: 30 Captains, 34 First Lieutenants, 34 Second Lieutenants, 34 Third Lieutenants, 21 Chief Engineers, 15 First Assistant Engineers, 15 Second Assistant Engineers; total, 183. An efficient complement of crews for the thirty-two vessels would be 873 men, consisting of petty officers, seamen, firemen, cooks, stewards and boys. The regular employment of pilots is not only an expensive item, but is considered prejudicial to the service in leaving the officers without any incentive to acquire a proper knowledge of their cruising grounds. There is no reason why they should not make themselves acquainted with the pilot grounds of their stations, and thus save to the Government the large sum at present required for pay and rations of pilots. The employment of pilots should be exceptional. The total number of officers and men to man thirty-two vessels will be 1,061, and the annual expenditure for their maintenance $748,622.

FIRES.

Heavy Loss in Philadelphia—Several Buildings Burned.

PHILADELPHIA, Penn., June 5.—Last night, about 11 o'clock, a fire broke out in the building situated on Third-street, below Market-street, occupied by a paper-box maker. The flames spread to the double building, Nos. 15 and 17 South Third-street, the upper stories of which were burned out. The first floor was occupied by FAIRTHORNE & RAND, brokers; the second floor by the Drug Exchange, and the upper stories by J. B. CORNEL, manufacturer of ladies' dress trimmings, whose entire stock was destroyed by fire or water. The loss is heavy. The fire reached No. 13, occupied by J. M. GLASS, and others, and damaged the roof. No. 19, occupied on the first floor by W. W. LEDYARD as a law-office, was damaged about the roof.

A Founder in Louisville Burned—Loss $90,000—One Hundred and Sixty Hands out of Work.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., June 5.—The extensive foundry and machine shop of DENNIS LONG & Co., on Ninth-street, was entirely consumed by fire yesterday afternoon. The fire originated in the pattern loft from sparks from the cupola. The loss on the building, machinery, tools and stock is $60,000, and on patterns $30,000; insurance $36,000, as follows: London, Liverpool and Globe, $13,000; North British and Mercantile, $6,000; Home, of New-York, $4,000; Franklin, of Louisville, $5,000; Louisville Insurance and Banking Company, $6,000; Germany Security, of Louisville, $2,000. One hundred and sixty hands are thrown out of employment. The surrounding buildings were on fire several times, but saved with little damage.

The Dry Weather in Maine—The Lumber Interest Suffering.

BANGOR, Me., June 5.—The hot term continues unabated, and everything is beginning to feel the need of rain. Yesterday the thermometer stood 90° in the shade, and to-day 86°. The severe and protracted drought is seriously affecting the lumber interest. A drive belonging to WHITE, HAGGON & WILLIER, in Pollitwog Stream, on the west branch of the Penobscot, containing seven millions of feet of logs, has been abandoned and the crew arrived here yesterday. A drive of fifteen millions of feet, now at Seboomook Lake, on the west branch of the Penobscot, is in imminent danger of being hung up, and will be unless there is immediate and heavy rain. A drive of twenty-eight millions of feet on the Matawaumkeag is hung up. Logs are in active demand and operators make the prices for manufacturers.

Careless Amusements—Human Remains Masquerading on a Boat.

CHICAGO, Ill., June 5.—For several days past numerous complaints have been made to the Health Department of a horrible stench which has pervaded the quarter in the vicinity of Washington and Wells streets. This morning a sanitary officer went to a medical institution in the vicinity, and although the owners protested that no stench came from their building, yet the officer persisted in making an examination, and finally reached the roof, where he found a vast collection of human remains in a condition of disgusting putrefaction, including bones, flesh, &c., of grown persons and infants. The nuisance was abated at once.

A British Bark Ashore on the Texas Coast.

GALVESTON, Texas, June 5.—The British bark Palace, from Liverpool, with an assorted cargo consigned to Messrs. HURLEY & Co., Galveston, went ashore, Wednesday night last, near San Luis Pass; she draws thirteen feet and is in ten feet of water. This is the same vessel that went ashore in Galveston Bay in the storm of October, 1867.

Miscellaneous Telegrams.

CHICAGO, Ill., June 5.—Last evening at a meeting of the Directors of the North-western Railway, JOHN F. TRACY was elected President; H. H. Pierson, Vice-President; M. L. Sykes, Second Vice-President; A. L. Pritchard, Secretary and Treasurer; J. E. Redfield, Assistant Secretary. Mr. TRACY is also President of the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railroad.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., June 5.—The body of a middle-aged man was found in the Hudson at this place today. He wore a heavy black coat, heavy light-mixed cloth vest and black pants. In his pocket was found $14 40 in money and a bunch of keys. He had been in the water several months. He is thought to be the missing man JAMES JAYCOX. The body is much decomposed, and his face is not recognizable.....The street cars commence running in this city regularly for the first time to-morrow.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., June 5.—A mass-meeting of Israelites was held in this city last evening. A large number of the most prominent citizens were in attendance. Resolutions were adopted expressive of horror at the late massacre in Roumania, and thanking the President of the United States and the members of Congress for the spirit displayed by them.

BATON RIGE, Ma., June 5.—The Republican conventions last evening nominated full sets of delegates to the State and District Convention. The delegates to the State Convention are unanimously in favor of the nomination of Gen. HAHN.

BUFFALO, N. Y., June 5.—JAS. B. WHITTAKER, of Pittsford, N. Y., aged seventeen, a pupil of Deveraux College, was drowned Saturday afternoon a mile below Whirlpool, Niagara River, while bathing. He was there in violation of a rule of the college. The body has not yet been found.

NEW-HAVEN, Conn., June 5.—The Shore Lynne Railroad bridge at Lynne, over the Connecticut River, is completed. The first train passed over it Saturday afternoon, and trains will pass regularly after today. This will shorten the time by this route about fifteen minutes.

THE HERMAN HOMICIDE.

Funeral of the Victim—Large Concourse of Local Politicians—A Suggestive Gathering—Police Precautions.

The remains of PATRICK HERMAN, the young man who met his death on Thursday last at the hands of Officer WILLIAM BURKE while the latter was resisting an assault, were yesterday removed for burial, amid considerable excitement.

The relatives and friends of the deceased had selected the Sabbath for the funeral, and it was largely attended. HERMAN's remains were on view for several hours, and as 2 o'clock drew near Pearl-street became crowded to excessive an immense gathering of men, women and children, who watched the preliminary proceedings with great interest. In consequence of the manner of HERMAN's death, Capt. ALLAIRE, commanding the Fourth Ward Police, felt some delicacy in sending any of his officers to the residence of the family, though he kept a small force in the Station as a reserve, and sent out a section to keep the street clear for the procession when it moved.

As soon as the necessary services had been performed, the body of the deceased was brought into the street, encased in a handsome casket, and placed in a large and heavily-planed hearse, on each side of which were ranged six pall-bearers, prominent among whom was Mr. MARK LAWRANCE. Several relatives were also in attendance for the family. The procession was then formed. It consisted of the Letter-Carriers' Association, of which the deceased was a member, and numbered nearly thirty persons. There was also present the Mark Lawrance Association of sixty members, the Cooper Association, under JOHN DRISCOLL, their President, who paraded with 400 men; the William Welsh Association one hundred strong; the Henry G. Leach Association, under the President, DENIS SHEA, who had one hundred of his members present. The Madison Guard also paraded in citizen's dress, under command of Capt. THOMAS MCGRATH, and appeared with fully two hundred men. The procession was quickly formed, and soon moved for the ferry, there being but little confusion, and no disturbance. The members of the various associations all appeared in neat attire, thereby, by their sedate appearance and correct carriage, did not prevent the spectators from forming an opinion of the denizens of the Fourth Ward not at all complimentary to the latter. In fact, the funeral was very similar to that of JAMES LOGAN No. 2, and a gathering of harder looking men could seldom be found, even in this City.

So confident were the Police authorities that a disturbance would occur among the roughs and ruffians assembled, that reserves from several of the neighboring Precincts were sent to Capt. ALLAIRE, who prudently kept them in his Station-house ready for any emergency. The arrival of these officers caused some excitement, but had, no doubt, a wholesome effect.

LAGER-BEER.

The Manufacture of the Beverage—Its Chemical Constituents—Its Effects.

There is a capital of over $100,000,000 invested in the manufacture of lager-beer in this country. Lager-beer, as it is manufactured by the German brewers, is a fermented beverage, and consists of the extract of malt (barley germinated by a watering process and then dried in a kiln) and hops and water, in which both of the first-named ingredients are boiled. It derives its name from the custom in Germany of brewing it only in Winter, and storing it away or laying back that part of it which is destined for use during the Summer months, in large, cool vaults or cellars, the German word lager having the definition of "stock," "store" and "stand." There are three kinds of the beverage, viz.: Winter beer, which is brewed and consumed during the Winter; lager-beer proper, and bock-beer, which contains more malt extract than lager-beer, and is therefore the strongest of the three. The chemical constituents of lager-beer are, according to Prof. JUSTUS VON LIEBIG, the renowned German chemist, as follows: Alcohol from 2.9 to 5 per cent.; solid substances, as starch-gum, sugar and vegetable fibre, from 4.5 to 6 per cent.; carbonic acid from 0.12 to 0.16 per cent.; water from 88.5 to 93 per cent. The proportion of alcohol contained in it is small, as appears from the above analysis, and in this respect it widely differs from distilled liquors. Lager-beer is a spirituous beverage, and is intoxicating if taken in excessive quantities. According to Prof. LIEBIG it exerts no influence in the human body nothing but the MOLESCHOTT, the well-known German naturalist, says that good lager-beer is just as nutritious as fruits are. The hop-bitter contained in lager-beer, according to some authorities, imparts to it tonic properties, which make it an invigorating beverage. Lager-beer, these authorities assert, favors the process of digestion by increasing the quantity of digestive secretions in the stomach and strengthens the muscular activity, when relaxed by sickness or long exertion. Good lager-beer is considered by prominent German physiologists quite as healthful to the human body, as tea and coffee. On the other hand, hop-bitter has a somewhat different effect upon the beverage from getting sour. Lager-beer seems to be altogether a German invention, and even in this country its manufacture is almost exclusively in the hands of Germans. Large quantities of it are brewed every Winter, and even, to some extent, during the Summer, in all cities where there is a large German population—for instance, in this City, in Newark, N. J., in Philadelphia, Baltimore, Cincinnati, St. Louis, Chicago, Milwaukee and many smaller places, chiefly at the West. The lager-beer brewed and sold at Milwaukee, Wis., is considered the best and cheapest of this country. It is the opinion of experienced brewers that the quality and taste of lager-beer depend to some degree upon the water used for it. The sensible Germans of the old country as well as of this, like those of all other nations, consider fresh water the best and healthiest of all drinks. If they feel inclined to take something stronger, when exhausted by hard work or as a matter of social custom, they prefer wine to lager-beer. But the wine is more expensive. As a rule, however, they prefer fermented lager-beer to whisky and other distilled liquors. The quantity of lager-beer consumed in this City is relatively larger than in any other city in the Union, although it cannot be maintained by the Germans of this City individually drink more lager than the Germans of Cincinnati, St. Louis or Chicago. Besides the home-made beverage, lager-beer manufactured at Newark, N. J., Philadelphia, Cincinnati, Toledo, Ohio, and other places of this country, and sometimes even foreign lager-beer, imported from Germany, is drank in this City.

Whitsunday at St. Alban's.

The festival of Whitsuntide, or Pentecost, was celebrated with the usual solemnities in the churches both of the Catholic and Episcopal denomination. At St. Albans there was a solemn high mass at 10½ A. M., Rev. Father MORRELL acting as celebrant and Rev. Father MOYNES as deacon. The musical portions were adaptations from MOZART, GOUNOD and HERBECK. There were solemn vespers at this church last evening. The congregation in attendance at both services was large, completely filling the edifice. The celebrant of the mass was habited in a beautifully embroidered cape. The altar was chiefly draped and fitted up with floral offerings. After the reading of the first gospel Father MOYNES ascended the pulpit, and preached a sermon based upon the Scripture narration of the descent of the Holy Ghost upon the Apostles, setting forth that this sending of the comforter to them was the fulfillment of the divine promise, and the only direction of the Church. There was a large number of communicants at the mass. The mass was celebrated in the same manner as is usual with all solemn celebrations here, and as has already been fully described in the TIMES.

EUROPEAN MAIL NEWS.

ARRIVAL OF THE STEAM-SHIP WESER.

The mails of the steam-ship Weser, which vessel left Bremen May 21, and Southampton May 24, and reached this port Saturday night, were delivered at this office yesterday. The advices they contain are later by two days than were those at hand by the China, on Wednesday.

The Bankman says that letters have been received announcing that Mr. ARCHIBALD GEIKIE, the geologist, who has been on a scientific expedition to the Lipara Islands, was stricken by fever soon after his arrival there, and has suffered so much in health that he has been compelled to abandon his researches, and is now on his way home.

An aggregate meeting of the Jewish congregations of Manchester had been held at the Derby-street School-rooms, Cheetham, in Manchester, "to unite in a petition to Parliament for the abolition of the University tests." There was a numerous attendance.

A communication from Vienna states that since the publication in Austria of the laws on religious liberty, a movement has arisen in the population of that city, which is, to say the least of it, a strange one. In the course of less than two years about 600 persons, of both sexes, have abjured Christianity for the Jewish faith, and what is curious is that these perversions are on the increase.

The Times of May 21, says that the new Cunard liner Abyssinia, of 5,000 tons, went out upon her Admiralty trial on the previous Friday, and ran the measured mile at Wemyss Bay at the rate of fifteen knots per hour. The Abyssinia is one of the four new ships fitting out in the Clyde to carry the mails between England and America, under Messrs. CUNARD, BURNS, and MOLIVER's contract, which, it will be remembered, they obtained from Her Majesty's Government for eight years, at £70,000 a year. The vessel is one of the finest specimens of naval architecture. The Abyssinia is unlike any of the Cunard steamers now afloat, as she is a four decker, and with her heavy iron masts and plumb stem, looks more like a line-of-battle ship than a vessel destined for the great marine service of the Cunard Company.

Count BEUST had addressed a circular to the Austrian diplomatic representatives abroad, respecting the programme of Count POTOCKI's Cisleithan Cabinet. The circular states that this programme contemplates the establishment of a popular Parliament, secure from future mutations by virtue of its election by direct suffrage, and which shall embody the nation's wishes within the limits of the present Constitution, and in no other manner. The appeal to universal suffrage is to be preceded by the dissolution of the Reichsrath and of the several Cisleithan Diets. To the new Diets a plan will be submitted for the enlargement of their autonomy, which will subsequently require to be submitted for approval to the Reichsrath. The Diets will at the same time be called upon to execution direct elections for the Reichsrath upon a liberal basis. The programme also proposes to strengthen the Upper House by the election of some representatives from the several Cisleithan Diets. In case the Diets refuse to sanction the proposed electoral reform, the Government will be constitutionally empowered to order direct elections. In conclusion, the circular asserts that the Government has had no intention to convoke an Assembly of Notables, but had ever since the commencement of its constitutional action desired to arrive at a mutual understanding by taking direct counsel with the leaders of all parties and nationalities.

SPAIN.

The Crown of Spain—Espartero's Declination of the Diadem.

The following is the correspondence between PRIM and ESPARTERO, carried by Señor MADOZ:

GEN. PRIM TO GEN. ESPARTERO.

SEÑOR DUKE: The Government of his Highness the Regent of the Kingdom believe the time has come to terminate the revolutionary work with the election of a monarch. The worthy Minister of the present Government, over which I have the honor to preside, are animated by the most patriotic sentiments.

On treating of the name of a monarch, the friends of your Highness suggest that of the pacificator of Spain the Duke of Vitoria.

Duly authorized by the Government, as on analogous occasions, I will esteem it a favor of your Highness if you will deign to tell us if you will accept the crown of Spain should it be offered you.

The Government have no candidate, but the majority is of their duty to prevent any fraction agitating in favor of a candidate who would not accept.

Your Highness will comprehend the patriotism with which the Government trust in the loyalty of consulting you as they do, hereby remitting this letter by our old friend, His Excellency Señor Don PASCUAL MADOZ, Deputy to the Cortes, who is most attached to your Highness.

I remain, with the greatest consideration, &c.,

EL MARQUES DE LOS CASTILLEJOS.

GEN. ESPARTERO TO GEN. PRIM.

To His Excellency the Marquis de los Castillejos:

YOUR EXCELLENCY: His Excellency Señor Don PASCUAL MADOZ has delivered to me the communication of your Excellency, asking me if I would accept the crown of Spain in case the Cortes elected me. I feel in the depth of my heart the consideration I owe to the Government over which your Excellency so worthily presides, and I assure that I am ever disposed to give my life for the liberty and the good of my country; but a duty of conscience obliges me respectfully to declare that it would not be possible for me to accept that exalted station, for my health and my years would not permit me to discharge it.

I remain, with all consideration, &c.,

EL DUQUE DE LA VICTORIA.

The Successful Military Insurrection in Lisbon—Consequent Sensation in Madrid—Saldanha in Favor of an Iberian Union.

Madrid (May 20) Correspondence Times.

The news of the successful military insurrection in Lisbon has created a great sensation in Madrid, as might be expected from the close connection between Spain and Portugal. Some months ago I wrote you an account of the state of popular dissatisfaction with the Ministry of the Duke DE LOULE, to whom the young King stuck with such pertinacity, and of the quarrel between the Prime Minister and the Duke DE SALDANHA. Since then the agitation, led on by the veteran soldier, the pet of the army, has continued, and culminated yesterday in a short encounter with them, resulting in a few killed and wounded on both sides, and the ultimate fraternization of the two forces. SALDANHA then entered the palace, and held a long conference with the King, who, yielding to the pressure, sent for the Duke DE LOULE, and told him the Ministry must resign, and he is replaced by one under SALDANHA, which was instantly done. By 8 o'clock, it is said, the soldiers had returned to their quarters, and perfect tranquility reigned. Until more details are known, it is impossible to say whether SALDANHA merely aimed at a change of Ministries, or whether the affair may not end in a change of dynasty and the formation of an Iberian union of Spain and Portugal. This idea is very much believed in here, and it is said to have been long a pet scheme of SALDANHA's.

The Spanish Government received the following telegram yesterday afternoon from their Ambassador in Lisbon, Señor FERNANDEZ DE LOS RIOS:

LISBON, May 19.

ARLY o'clock this morning there broke out simultaneously in the Castle of St. George and in the Infantry Barrack, No. 5, an insurrectionary movement, indicated by the cry of "Viva Saldanha." The greater part of the Tenth Regiment, and the half of the battalion of Viva Saldanha, which made artillery, joined it. SALDANHA placed himself at their head, and directed himself to the Palace. The Palace was garrisoned by the First Regiment of Infantry and some lancers and artillery. On the approach of SALDANHA's column, the garrison opened fire, which was replied to by the former, and there were some killed and wounded on both sides. The garrison ultimately went over to SALDANHA, who entered the palace at 4 o'clock this morning, where a long conference with His Majesty the Duke DE LOULE was sent for, and presented the resignation of the Ministry. SALDANHA was then charged with the formation of a new one, assuming himself as President and Minister of War. All the troops returned to their quarters. The population presented their ordinary aspect. It is said that in Oporto and other places there have been movements in favor of Saldanha, but I have not yet received details.

After the reading of this dispatch in the Cortes, Minister RIVERO, in reply to a question, said the Spanish Government were not aware what banner the Duke DE SALDANHA had raised, but they all knew who he was and what he wanted. The Deputies could form their own opinions on the events, but the Government had to maintain a prudent reserve.

In political circles here a belief exists that the Duke DE SALDANHA intends to do all he can in favor of the Iberian union. Were such a plan accomplished, it would certainly put an end to some of the vexed questions now agitating Spain.

THE ENGLISH TRAGEDY.

The Seven-Fold Murder near Uxbridge—A Whole Family Butchered.

From the Daily News, May 24.

One of the most extraordinary tragedies which has taken place for many years was discovered last evening at the village of Denham, about two miles from Uxbridge. It seems that a family named MARSHALL resided at a cottage in that village, the husband carrying on business as an engineer. Bridget MARSHALL, there lived in the cottage his wife and three children, whose ages ran between three and nine years, and also the mother and sister of MARSHALL. This day (Tuesday) had been fixed for the marriage of the sister, and it is to the fact of her wedding dress being brought home that the discovery of the murder is to be attributed. Nothing had been seen of the murdered persons since Saturday; but upon a young girl going to the cottage yesterday with the garment referred to, and gaining no reply, the neighbors had their suspicions aroused, and an entry was soon effected into the house. A scene of the most horrible description then presented itself. On the ground-floor the bodies of Mrs. MARSHALL and her son-in-law were found quite dead—the former lying on her back, and the latter, who had her night-dress on, and was evidently preparing for bed, was placed across her. Both had their heads fearfully mutilated, and the absence of blood shows the place was resorted to by those who witnessed the dreadful discovery. At the right hand, on entering the cottage, and near the fire-place, three children belonging to MARSHALL were also found with their heads frightfully battered, and also quite dead. The mother of MARSHALL was likewise found, having been brutally murdered on the same way; and on entering the shed where MARSHALL had been at work, wearing a smock-frock, his body was also found. It was covered with sacks, and it was apparent that he had had a desperate struggle. His hands were scratched in several places, and there were marks as if he had been dragged about the ground. His head had also been beaten in in the same manner as those of the other victims. There was another child belonging to MARSHALL—a little boy, aged sixteen months—who had been sent to his grandmother's to be "out of the way" during the wedding of MARSHALL's sister; and but for that circumstance the seven-fold murder of this the little creature would have been added to the list of the murdered members of the family. The medical gentlemen called were Drs. FERRIS and MACNAMARA, and it is their opinion that the awful deed has been perpetrated as long since as Saturday night or Sunday morning. The county coroner, who has been made, up to the present time, to obtain no clue as to the murderer, or the cause of the dreadful crime. A forge hammer and an ordinary ax—with which the murders are supposed to have been committed—have been discovered with traces of blood upon them. Whatever the motive by which the murderer or murderers was actuated, it is difficult to imagine the fearful work can have been done by one person—robbery does not seem to have been the object, for nothing appears to have been disturbed; the rings and several articles of jewelry worn by the unfortunate persons not having been removed.

The excitement in the village is intense. MARSHALL and his wife and sister were, it is said, much respected by their neighbors.

CHRISTIAN CONGRESS.

Meeting in London in Approval of the Proposed Conference in New-York of Protestant Christians of all Nations.

A public meeting was held, May 23, at the Mansion House, in London, to take into consideration the proposed Conference, to be held at the invitation of Christians, at New-York, in the month of September next. The Lord Mayor was in the chair. The company included Lord Chichester, Lord Alfred Churchill, the Bishop of Ripon, Rev. T. Binney, Mr. Kennaway, M. P., Rev. Dr. Stoughton, &c. The Lord Mayor, in opening the proceedings, explained that, although the meeting was called by the friends of the Evangelical Alliance, it was not a meeting of that body, since many of them, like himself, were not members of it. His own opinion was that this invitation from America should be answered by the whole people of England, and that could best be done by a meeting held in London, at the Mansion House, and presided over by the Lord Mayor. Our common Protestantism was not probably overlaid by great amount of notes, and the Christians there, if calmly and quietly as Christians they should submit that there was such a thing left in the world as a sound, old Protestantism. It was their duty to uphold the evangelical strength of the people of America. Rev. Dr. SPRAGUE explained how the meeting had arisen, and referred to the Conferences previously held in London, Paris, Berlin, Geneva and Amsterdam. The Earl of CHICHESTER moved "That the meeting, having heard with much interest the statements explaining the objects and arrangements for carrying out the proposed Conference of Christians of various lands about to be held in the United States, and of opinion that such Conferences in the present day, especially in the state of Christian Europe, that loudly call for united action on the part of all who love the Lord Jesus Christ in spirit and in truth. They had, therefore, with satisfaction the proposed Conference as likely in their judgment to exercise a beneficial influence upon nations, and upon the Church of God throughout the world." He agreed that the present times were such that there was a peculiar obligation upon all Christians to endeavor to unite more than they had ever hitherto done. The Bishop of Ripon, in seconding the resolution, said that, although not a member of the Evangelical Alliance, he sympathized with the present movement, because he believed the Conference would be a most important manifestation to the world of the deep unity which existed among real Christians. Protestants were often taunted with a want of unity, and it was said the only church which possessed unity was the compact mass of the Church of Rome. That assumption was utterly false. However much Protestants might be divided upon non-essentials, they were agreed upon all fundamental articles of faith; and the points upon which they agreed were more than those upon which they differed. The approaching Conference, he believed, would be a witness to Protestant truth, and a proof that it was not a mere negation. Rev. T. BINNEY supported the motion. He had been honored by a direct invitation to the Conference, and very much regretted his inability to make the necessary effort. It was exceedingly appropriate that while a Council was sitting at Rome with the object of consolidating all evil, there should be a system of error and superstition, a Conference of Evangelical Protestants should be held in the New World. He was much obliged to Mr. DISRAELI for his extended parable, Lothair, which was one of the finest anti-Romanist productions he had ever seen. On the motion of Mr. MACFIE, M. P., seconded by Dr. BLACKWELL, and supported by Mr. KENNAWAY, M. P., thanks were voted to the Americans for their kind invitation, and hopes were expressed that the peace, and amity, and Christian charity which both countries desired, would be much strengthened by the Conference. A vote of thanks to the Lord Mayor, on the motion of Lord ALFRED CHURCHILL, Hon. Mr. JOCELYN, and Rev. Mr. JOBSON, President of the Wesleyan Conference, concluded the proceedings.

CONSTITUTIONAL FRANCE.

The Acceptance of the Plebiscitum by the Nation—The French Press on the Emperor's After-speech.

The address of the Emperor NAPOLEON in acknowledgment of the formal announcement of the results of the vote on the plebiscitum, delivered in Paris, May 21, appeared in full in the TIMES of the following day. We append the opinions of the principal French journals on the speech. The general opinion among the moderate papers of all shades is favorable. The Journal des Débats regarded the sentiments expressed as liberal and, if acted upon in a judicious spirit, they may tend to the restoration of public confidence in the Government and the Chamber. The organs of the extreme Right, the Pays and the Peuple, are equally satisfied, and interpret the sentences specially addressed to the Legislative body as a pledge that the present Chamber will be permitted to complete the legal term of its existence. The Patrie, the Constitutionnel, and the Moniteur are correspondingly pleased, while the Français rejoices to find the Emperor no longer condemns a Parliamentary system, but takes exception to the statement that the constitution is new beyond all controversy, as it holds that the various measures of reform indicated by the Emperor, and which it thoroughly approves, can only be properly carried out by the further development of political freedom. The clerical Univers is dissatisfied with the speech, which appears to it to have been conceived under the influence of one dominant idea—that of authority; but no special objection consists in the fact that no allusion is made to religious interests. The Trait approved the speech, but considers that it will be impossible to prevent constitutional discussions. The Journal de Paris congratulates the Emperor upon his moderation and good sense in accepting the restrictory suggestions of those who would have had him convert the great plebiscitary victory into an excuse for adopting a retrograde policy. The Liberté considers the speech the honest and straightforward declaration, and the Opinion Nationale is pleased to find in it no indication of a desire to retrograde upon the questions of passports or of personal power, but it does not admit that the present Constitution is so perfect as to preclude the necessity for discussing improvements in the future. The Gaulois and Français, on the contrary, see in the speech a renewed selection of the right of personal government—a view which is shared by the Union. The Temps is not pleased with the speech, in which it finds no trace of a real desire to adopt in practice real liberal principles. The Rappel and the other "Red" journals, of course, condemn it upon many and opposite grounds; but all merging into the usual formula of their party—that under the Empire liberty is impossible, that Parliamentary government, as at present practised, is a sham, and that only under a Republic can the real wishes of France be carried out and her glory and prosperity be secured.

Death of a Noted Tenant of the French War Office.

The French papers announce the death of Jacko, the famous parrot in the War Office in Paris. Jacko was first brought into the office in 1830, by Marshal SOULT, and he remained for forty years at his post, unaffected by revolutions or party conflicts. After a time he came to be looked upon as an indispensable appendage of the War Department, and when there was a Cabinet crisis people used to ask who was to get, not the War Office portfolio, but the War Office parrot. Though he served under eighteen different Ministers, he always remained constant to the principles which were instilled into him when he first entered office. Though under the Republic and the Second Empire he remained a staunch royalist, and there were few members of his party who spoke their minds with so much frankness. One day his repeated cries of "Vive le roi" so annoyed Marshal LEBOEUF that he ordered the indiscreet bird to be turned out. Jacko had a friend, however, in the porter, who took him into his lodge and taught him to add, "Dis donc, Arnaud!" to his usual cry. The bird was then put back into his room, and as the Marshal was passing commented out, "Vive le roi, dis donc, Arnaud!" "A la bonne heure," said the Minister, and Jacko was at once retaken in favor. Of late years the clerks tried to teach him "Vive l'Empereur!" but he never could bring out the entire sentence without tremendous efforts. He got on very well as far as "Vive l'Empe—," but at this point he seemed to choke, his feathers would rise and his eyes rolled with an anxious expression as if he felt his conscience reproaching him. At last, after several minutes' intense struggling, he would jerk out the last syllable "—reur!" in a tone of embarrassed triumph. He died recently after the Duchess of BERRY, and on the anniversary of the death of NAPOLEON I., three days before the plebiscitum.

THE CANADIAN TROUBLE.

Singular Attitude of the Toronto "Globe"—What the Popular Sentiment Really Is—The Grand Trunk Railway—The Cause.

From Our Special Correspondent.

KINGSTON, Thursday, June 2, 1870.

As I wrote you yesterday from Montreal, the prompt and decided action of the United States Government in arresting Gens. O'NEIL, GLEASON, DONNELLY and other leaders in the Fenian organization who have made themselves conspicuous in the recent troubles along the frontier, is being met by a generous recognition on this side by the great bulk of the people. This is the more noticeable in consequence of the bitterness displayed by the Toronto Globe, a paper that wields great influence in the Province of Ontario, and frequently moulds public opinion. The editorials in the Globe relative to the Fenian raid have been marked by excessive rancor until the people have begun to wonder at the cause. When the Fenians first began their aggressive movements on the border, the tone of this newspaper escaped general observation amid the excitement that naturally prevailed. But as the actual situation began to be fully understood it was noticed more generally, as it stood alone in a great measure in its persistent vituperation and abuse of President GRANT and his Administration. The Globe of yesterday, in alluding to the arrest of the Fenian leaders by the American Government, says:

"Very possibly their detention may be short and merely formal, as in 1866. It will be for our Government to determine whether a demand shall be made for their surrender under the Extradition treaty. That the terms of that treaty cover the case is hardly doubtful. Although no murder was actually committed, O'NEI

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

HENRIETTA TEMPLE; A Love Story. By Right Hon. B. DISRAELI. New-York: D. APPLETON & Co. 1870.

The comet-like success of Lothair is of course followed by a train of all the old starlets and asteroids of fiction that first embellished Mr. DISRAELI's political course, illumined his peculiar and versatile genius, and now assist in making up the constellation of his fame. After Lothair, it is natural, we are to have new editions of The Young Duke, Venitia, Coningsby, and the rest. Henrietta Temple is unique in this: It is a love story pure and simple. It is so old-fashioned in tone, so strained in metaphor, so extravagant in hyperbole, that to modern eyes—we know not whether to rejoice or to grieve that it is so—it seems almost ridiculous. The letters of Ferdinand to Henrietta can only be exceeded for overwrought passion and rhetorical flourish by one thing in the world, and that is the letters of Henrietta to Ferdinand. We are irresistibly reminded, in reading either correspondence, of burlesque, and we ask ourselves whether this is the fault of the letters or our own. Have we become so passionless, so business-like and so automatic that the outgush of pure young hearts, meeting each other with all the rapture of first love, is merely absurd? Or are the missives themselves intrinsically exaggerated and silly? No doubt both questions may be truthfully answered in the affirmative. We have not, as a rule, sufficient sympathy with the spontaneous effusion of youthful passion. The hard clash of worldly competition, the marriage of convenience, the habit of concealing genuine emotion, which so naturally leads to the encouragement of satirical literature and to ironical habits of expression—all tend to make a love story like Henrietta Temple appear stilted and unreal. The master passion is not conveyed in our day by the words and phrases that imparted it in the last century, or even fifty years ago. Compare the love-making in RICHARDSON's novels, or even that in the "School for Scandal," with the love-making of ANTHONY TROLLOPE's stories, or of plays like "School," and it becomes plain enough how unsuited is the language of our ancestors to the modern requirements of our own day. Love itself has not changed—at least, we will hope it has not—but the speech that describes it has undergone greater mutations than our dress, so that the love-talk of three generations back seems to us as funny as the hoops, and ruffs, and buckles, and knee-breeches of the same period. For all this, there is about both a certain archæological curiosity, and, with reflection, we shall see that there is something more. No observant eye can fail to perceive that there is a growing tendency to revert to the antique, so that what we thought in youth almost unpleasantly old-fashioned, is becoming now that which is most in vogue—the supremest fop. Our costumes, our books, our furniture, are all reverting to the models and tastes of the last century, or even to those of an earlier date, so that the ladies and the libraries and the drawing-rooms, whose appearance is most suggestive of our great-great-grandmothers, are in the highest fashion of our own immediate time. And this prompts the momentous question, may not our modes of expression return, like those of our attire and equipage, to the old forms? May not the high-flung chivalry, the romantic polysyllables of Capt. Armine, again come to be regarded, as Mr. DISRAELI when he wrote them evidently regarded them, as the choicest type of well-bred gallantry? There is fair warrant for the supposition. At all events we may be wise to avoid laughing at what fashion may in no long time require us in good faith and sober earnest to employ. But with all allowance for this possibility, and with all admiration for the luxuriant imagination and dramatic susceptibility which give Mr. DISRAELI so keen a feeling for the accessories of situation and the development of character, it cannot be denied that his sentiment is sometimes out of drawing, or what we Yankees might call "highfalutin'." The disposition which is chastened and toned down in Lothair, in Henrietta Temple is vivid, if not glaring. Still, the latter story will be read with great interest, even by those to whom it is a tale twice told. It is pleasant to recur to the warmth and delicious ecstacy of early feeling, even when it can never more revive for us. And among winding green lanes, amid the scent of flowers and new-mown hay, or among the rocks and sands that lean down to the sea, we can fancy that many will read Henrietta Temple this season with lively, and some with tearful interest, while they rejoice that the versatile author has erred in the way he has, rather than—like the majority of late novelists—on a side precisely opposite.

MISS VAN KORTLAND. A Novel. By the Author of "My Daughter Ethnor." New-York: HARPER & BROTHERS. 1870.

In a different sense from the verses spoken of in SHERIDAN's play, the book before us presents a rivulet of narrative meandering through a meadow of unnecessary accompaniments of character and dialogue. The story relates to the love making of four pretty-well-defined personages, in whose fate the author makes us feel tolerably interested. The adjuncts chiefly consist of the sayings and doings of sundry very tiresome people, who are intended to appear eccentric but who become merely unbearable. The humor of the book has been apparently thrown in on the same principle as that on which low comic parts are introduced into melodrama, and is equally disconnected with the main action of the tale. The mining districts of Pennsylvania must be extremely favorable to odd developments of character, if we may judge by the profusion of originals to which the author introduces us in that locality. An acquaintance with them in real life must, however, be somewhat depressing, if they are as equally destitute of individual variety as the samples depicted here. There is throughout the book an amount of iteration of the same characteristic remarks by these people, that is significant either of sad poverty of expression among the originals themselves, or a wonderful lack of invention in their describer. The leading characters are drawn in a way which suggests a somewhat weak imitation of the author of Guy Livingstone. The central figure, Gay Van Kortland, is a New-York belle possessing more than the usual power of fascination joined to an amazing brilliancy of talk, and a considerable contempt for social conventionalities. Her admirer-in-chief, Noel Sexton, is one of those lazy, cynical, versatile and rather unprincipled gentlemen who have become so popular in one class of modern fiction. The prevalence of the type will be recognized in touches like these: "The delicate white hand that looked as fine as a woman's," but "was strong and unyielding as an iron palm in a velvet glove, and the graceful, almost feminimely perfect frame, with its slow, indolent movements," which "was capable of supporting fatigues that a person with twice his appearance of strength could not have endured." We could suggest to the author, who has shown himself capable of better things, that to the mass even of ordinary readers this sort of writing has become very stale, and that by one who appears honestly anxious to cultivate the scanty crop of native fiction the exhausted mannerism of English writers ought to be carefully avoided. Nor can we say that the device by which the lovers of the story are made to keep up a mutual misunderstanding until the last chapter but one, is at all probable or intelligible. There is some natural and affecting writing in describing the intercourse between Margaret Dane and Alan Prescott, but the portraits of both are too hastily outlined to awaken the interest which ought to have attached to the current of their affection. Altogether, Miss Van Kortland is of a very unequal and disappointing character, though in parts giving evidence of a power which, directed into a proper channel, would be productive of more enduring results.

A TREATISE ON THE CHRISTIAN DOCTRINE OF MARRIAGE. By HUGH DAVEY EVANS, LL.D. With a Biographical Sketch of the Author, and an Appendix containing Bishop Andrews' "Discourse against Second Marriages," &c. Now printed for the first time in this country. New-York: Published by HURD & HOUGHTON.

This is a valuable contribution to literature, and its appearance is timely. The author was a learned and able lawyer of Baltimore, who died two years ago and left this book, the result of years of careful study and judicious thought, with the request that it should be published after his death. The work is divided into fifteen chapters. The first sets forth the relations between law, public opinion and conscience, asserting the supremacy of the Divine law. The second chapter shows that the sexes are not equal, but complementary, and therefore fitted for union. The proof of this is given at length, and its ethical consequences enforced by an examination of their moral and intellectual peculiarities. After these introductory chapters, the Christian doctrine of marriage is discussed in ten chapters, with great fullness and clearness. It is shown that marriage is not only a civil contract, but also a Divine institution, and that its essence consists in the indissoluble union of one man to one woman, sanctioned by the consent of the parties and the blessing of God. From such a union three things are logically deduced, viz.: the exclusiveness of marriage as opposed to polygamy, its indissolubleness as opposed to divorce, and the obedience of the wife to the husband. The closing chapters relate to impediments to marriage and the choice of a partner. The work is written from the most rigid and conservative stand-point, and some of its conclusions will meet serious question—such as, for instance that marriage with a deceased wife's sister is incestuous, and that adultery by the husband is not a cause for divorce. But with a few exceptions, the book is valuable as an attempt to counteract the growing tendency to loose ideas upon the marriage relation, the disregard of its sacred ties, and the progress of Mormonism, free-love, and similar abominations. We regret to notice occasional carelessness in the mechanical execution of the volume, such as is not often found in the books of this house.

WARP AND WOOF. A Book of Verse. By SAMUEL WILLOUGHBY DUFFIELD. New-York: AMOS D. F. RANDOLPH & CO., No. 770 Broadway. 1870.

Mr. DUFFIELD is a graceful, scholarly, if not a strikingly imaginative writer, whose name has for some time been familiar to readers of our foremost literary papers and magazines. The present volume is made up, we believe, chiefly of pieces first printed in different periodicals and now collected. They are of various merit, but all indicate a practiced and polished hand, with perhaps a trifle too much fondness for moralizing. "Atalanta and Hippomenes" gives the reader an opportunity of comparing Mr. DUFFIELD's method with Mr. MOORE' in his relation of the same legend. A translation of "Dies Irae" is given which we do not find very good. The poem quoted below is a fair sample of the DUFFIELD's style and power:

UNDER-GRADUATE ORIOLES. On a picture by Mrs. EMMA SELINGMAN, Philadelphia, March 5, 1867.

Four little mouths agape forever;
Four little throats which are never full;
Four little nestlings, who discover
One big worm by a mighty pull.

Up on a limb—the lazy fellow!
Perches the father bold and gay;
Proud of his coat of black and yellow,
Always singing throughout the day.

Close at their side the watchful mother,
Quietly sober in dress and song,
Chooses her place, and asks no other,
Flying and gleaning all day long.

Four little mouths in time grow smaller;
Four little throats in time are filled;
Four little nestlings quite appall her,
Spreading their wings for the sun to gild.

Lazy no longer sits the father;
He is the care of the singing school;
He must teach them to fly and gather
Splendid worms by the nearest pool.

Swinging away the shaken branches,
Under the light of the happy sun;
Dropping through blossoms like avalanches—
Father Oriole's work is done.

Four little beaks their mouths embolden;
Four little throats are round and strong;
Four little nestlings fledged and golden
Graduate in the world of song.

MEMOIR OF REV. JOHN SCUDDER, M. D., THIRTY-SIX YEARS MISSIONARY IN INDIA. By Rev. J. B. WATERBURY, D. D. New-York: HARPER & BROTHERS, Publishers.

Dr. SCUDDER was one of the earliest and most distinguished among American Protestant missionaries. He left a lucrative practice as a physician in this City, in obedience to what he considered a call of duty to preach the gospel to the heathen, and for more than a generation he labored with an enthusiasm which discouragements could not damp, nor trials dim, to bring the natives of India under the influence of Christianity. In this work, his education and experience as a physician was of the greatest use to him; and his success was due not only to religious earnestness that amounted almost to fanaticism, and an energy rarely paralleled, but also to his skill as a surgeon, and his whole-souled love of his fellow-men. The work before us is composed mainly of Dr. SCUDDER's letters and of letters to him and these are very characteristic, showing good judgment on the part of the biographer in their selection. The style of the book is not finished or attractive, but the subject is eminently so. Those who do not sympathize with the decided theology and stern principles of the veteran missionary, will yet admire his sturdy character, his heroic self-denial, and his patient toils; and few will read the book without wishing that more labor had been bestowed upon the delineation of a character so vigorous and original, as that of this true follower of the Apostle Paul in a work of missionary evangelism.

THE FIRST BOOK OF BOTANY. By ELIZA A. YOUMANS. New-York: D. APPLETON & Co. 1870.

This little volume professes to be "designed to cultivate the observing powers of children," a promise which the simple, yet thorough, method of plant analysis is well fitted to fulfill. It is one of those manuals which can be taken up and studied profitably at any age. Its definitions are not too abstruse for childish comprehension, and it contains nothing redundant to unfit it for the use of the uninstructed adult. The author carefully avoids going beyond the sphere of analysis, leaving all reference to the generic or specific names of plants to a more advanced treatise. We are of opinion that a little familiar talk about some of our most common wild flowers, and their characteristics, would have been a more profitable addition to the book than the discussion on the educational claims of botany which is appended. Some such aid to the first attempts at real botanizing is all that is wanted to make the book perfect of its kind.

THE ILIAD OF HOMER. Translated into English verse. By W. G. CALDCLEUGH, Author of "Eastern Tales" and "The Branch and Other Poems." Philadelphia: J. B. LIPPINCOTT & Co. 1870.

This work Mr. CALDCLEUGH diffidently introduces as "the desultory occupation of a few years." As a curious example of how completely a judicious translator may eliminate all the poetry from the Iliad, his version is not without a certain melancholy interest. The problem of finding out in what metre it is written from such lines as

"For Agamemnon insulted Chryses."

or,

"But Agamemnon was much displeased,"

or,

"Wounded is Diomed Tydeus' son, Ulysses, also, and Agamemnon," may furnish, moreover, desultory occupation for a few years to those of Mr. CALDCLEUGH's friends for whose "amusement it was written," and who may have the necessary leisure. Apart from this, we fear, the author has not greatly enriched the literature of his country.

FEATHERS FOR ARROWS; OR, ILLUSTRATIONS FROM MY NOTE-BOOK. By C. H. SPURGEON. New-York: SHELDON & COMPANY.

The great popular preacher of London has gathered in this volume a variety of his most appropriate illustrations of religious truth, experience and doctrine for the use of his fellow-laborers in the ministry. A large part of these are selected from old English authors. Some are from modern writers in England and America. Excellent indexes of subjects and of Scripture texts facilitate the use of the book by students. We subjoin a few specimens of the illustrations:

"How to deal with the difficulties of the Bible." An old man once said, "For a long period I puzzled myself about the difficulties of Scripture, till at last I came to the resolution that reading the Bible was like eating fish: when I find a difficulty I lay it aside and call it a bone. Why should I choke on the bone when there is so much nutritious meat for me? Some day, perhaps, I may find that even the bone may afford me nourishment."

The influence of communion with God is thus portrayed.

"When you have been sitting in a well-lighted room, and are suddenly called into the outer darkness, how black it seems; and thus whoever man has dwelt in communion with God, sin becomes exceeding sinful, and the darkness in which the world doth appears tenfold night."

Thus he illustrates the advantage of youthful piety:

"In an election, the first votes recorded count all the day long, and so encourages the party all throughout the anxious hours of polling. When men give in their names for Jesus and his cause in the morning of their lives, their whole existence influences their time, and their encouragement to the good cause is life-long. Young people, remember this!"

THE NATURALISTS' GUIDE. By C. J. MAYNARD. Boston: FIELDS, OSGOOD & Co. 1870.

This is a popular contribution to the science of Ornithology, chiefly with reference to that department of it known as taxidermy, which prescribes the mode of preparing and preserving specimens. Any book which sends men to the fields and woods and gives them a zest for the study and observation of nature has a special value amid the artificial conditions of modern society. The scientific eminence of the author of this treatise is sufficient guarantee for its trustworthiness, and the style in which it is written leaves nothing to be desired on the score of clearness and simplicity. A descriptive catalogue of the birds of Eastern Massachusetts is appended, and including, as it does, short notices of 299 different species, cannot fail to be of great assistance to the student.

LIFTING THE VEIL. New-York: CHARLES SCRIBNER & Co.

Two women, both of whom have been bereaved, seek, in friendly conversation, to heal each other's wounds, and find some satisfying comfort. The stronger mind belongs to Agatha, the deeper and more sensitive religious nature to Eleanor. Their thoughts lead them to talk of the life of the soul here, and to discuss with reverence and hope the future life as taught by nature, by the inner consciousness, and by the Scriptures. Many of the subjects discussed have been recently handled from the material stand-point, in Miss PHELPS' book, Gates Ajar. In Lifting the Veil they are considered from the spiritual point of view, and the general tone of the book may be gathered from the following passage:

"However I may speculate about these things, one thing I know, that I am more certain of than I am of anything else, that the more we think of God and care for Him, the less we will think and care for these (material) things. We dwell so much on them, because we are conscious that we do not love God enough to make His presence happiness, so we try to fill our hearts with chaff. It is our Heaven, not God's, that we are seeking; a selfish heaven, of enjoyment our own way rather than His."

The book is sometimes morbid, but it is upon a subject which is full of interest to every thoughtful mind, and will be of great practical utility to persons who are sorrowing for the death of friends.

SWEDENBORG RITE AND THE GREAT MASONIC LEADERS OF THE EIGHTEENTH CENTURY. By SAMUEL BRENICK. New-York: Masonic Publishing Company.

The author of this volume has evidently expended great labor and made extended researches in order to give his brother Masons all the information possible relative to SWEDENBORG's connection with Freemasonry. In the volume he enters at considerable length into the general history of Masonry in Europe, shows how the Swedenborgian Rite began, and that Swedenborgian masons were the great leaders of the eighteenth century. He afterward narrates the inception of the rite in America, and its influence in the various lodges. It is a singular fact that SWEDENBORG does not, in any of his writings, allude to the fact that he is a Freemason. This book will be of interest to all Masons, but specially to those of high grade in the craft.

HONOR BRIGHT: A Romance. By the author of "Malbrook." New-York: CARLETON. 1870.

An original little story effectively told. Its chief blemishes consist of a feminine profusion of italics, and a straining after effect in jerky spasmodic paragraphs of interjectional sentiment. Its merits lie in a vigorous directness of narrative, a pretty accurate discrimination and analysis of character, and some perception of the mine of personal experience and incident which lies outside of the much-worn track of ordinary drawing-room novels.

CURRENT NOTES.

The Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company of Boston have their annual parade and dinner today.

The Labor Reformers have sixteen votes in the New-Hampshire House of Representatives, the Democrats 114, and the Republicans 168.

NAZARETH HILL, who was accused of stealing a horse in Detroit, has been triumphantly acquitted. There is more good in NAZARETH than he got credit for.

The Governor-General of Canada is soon to visit Montreal and invest Prince ARTHUR with the insignia of knighthood of the order of St. Patrick, conferred upon him by the Queen.

So far as we are yet advised Treasurer SPINNER did not yesterday write a letter on the national banks and the funding of the debt. But it should not be forgotten that yesterday was Sunday.

The election for Mayor in Washington, which has been as fiercely contested as if the country's President and entire Congress depended upon the issue, is to be held today. There are 13,490 voters registered, of whom 7,325 are black.

The vote in Minnesota on the 31st ult., upon the proposition to pay the State bonds with internal improvement lands, was very light, probably not more than half the vote of the State being cast. Nearly two-thirds of the votes cast were in favor of the proposition.

The people of Wolfeborough, N. H., held a meeting a day or two ago to make arrangements for the celebration of the centennial anniversary of the settlement of the town, but after appointing a committee to consider and report upon the matter adjourned until 1870.

Rochester papers publish a card from the Fenian prisoners, thanking the generous American and Irish citizens who bailed them, and promising that their names shall be cherished in the heart of every true Irishman and lover of liberty.

The Indians delegation in Congress now consists of seven Republicans and four Democrats, and a correspondent at Indianapolis says that gross mismanagement alone can prevent the Republicans having even a larger number in the next House.

The Chicago Tribune says that the June statement of the public debt, showing so great a reduction, is exasperating to all tax-payers, and it appeals to Congress resolutely to compel such a reduction of taxation as will bring the rate of payment down to the absolute requirements of the Government.

JEFF. DAVIS was present at the memorial services over the rebel dead in Memphis, Tenn., and a local paper says that while the orator recounted the fadeless glories of the Confederate soldiers there could be observed passing over the calm and philosophic features of Mr. DAVIS sudden flashes of light which bespoke the soldier's heart and great soul within. Possibly the spectator did not read the flashes aright.

The referees in the suit brought by the National Hide and Leather Bank of Boston against the three bondsmen of JAMES D. MARTIN, the defaulting cashier, have reported that each bondsman is indebted to the bank in the sum of $2,000. This is a virtual division of the liability under the bonds ($5,000 each) between the bank and the bondsmen.

"They say" that when a bill to appropriate $5,000 for the Lunatic Asylum in a Southern State was before the Legislature, a dusky member arose and said: "Mr. Speaker, I does tink dat de lunies had ort to be took care ob. I knows a cullered man in my county dat got shot and mortally wounded, and is a cripple for life, an dat man is now living in my county and had ort to be helped."

The Executive Committee appointed by the recent North-western Woman's Suffrage Convention in Chicago has published an address urging organization throughout the North-western States, declaring that to secure the submission by Congress to the States of a woman's suffrage amendment is the first work before them, and proclaiming that now is the time to strike for the principles of liberty and of a purely republican government. Accordingly some of the North-western women are preparing to strike.

A dispatch from Concord, N. H., to a Boston paper makes the somewhat remarkable statement that the popular sentiment there favors the election of either Hon. JAMES WILSON or Ex-Gov. GOODWIN to the United States Senate to serve at least one year and then resign in favor of some one of the numerous "rings." "Popular sentiment" may favor this plan, but, even if that be possible, neither Gen. WILSON nor Gov. GOODWIN is a man to submit to any such arrangement on his part. It will be necessary for "popular sentiment" to select gentlemen of less character than they.

The Hartford Courant complains sorely of the glaring disproportion between the several Senatorial Districts in Connecticut, in point of population. The First District is the largest. It casts more than twice as many votes as the districts average; and it is more than twice as large as the Second, Third, Seventh, Eleventh, Fifteenth and Sixteenth; more than three times as large as the Ninth, Thirteenth, Fourteenth, Seventeenth, Eighteenth and Nineteenth; and more than four times as large as the Twentieth and Twenty-first Districts. The Courant recommends a new distribution, and that the number of Senators be increased to thirty-six.

The Democrats of the Fourth District of Indiana have nominated Hon. D. S. GOODING for Congress, and at the same time have formally resolved that "the State and the nation owe a debt of lasting gratitude to Indiana's distinguished statesman, Hon. T. A. HENDRICKS, for his invaluable services while honored with a seat in the United States Senate, and for his bold, manly and able defense of Democratic principles, and as one of the noble, self-sacrificing few who stood shoulder to shoulder with his illustrious compeers, during the attempted outrage upon the late retired President of the United States, thereby overthrowing their base and insidious designs of establishing a kingly and monarchial government."

There are strange, and often quite unexpected compensations in this life. Some conservatives may have deeply regretted that the Chinaman should threaten to usurp the office of the washer-woman, but a white man in Sacramento, Cal., has given such persons a hint of what may be done. A poor Chinaman timorously presented his bill to this white gamfior [illegible] and instead of quietly [illegible] it aside with the remark that it was not convenient to pay it just then, the latter made his Mon a blow between the eyes, and followed it up with a kick and altogether thoroughly demolished the quaker-man.

The Detroit Tribune says that a party of young ladies and gentlemen were upset while sailing on a shallow pond in Michigan one day last week, but as the water was only three or four feet deep, they all reached the shore in safety except one of the ladies, who sank to the bottom without an effort to save herself. She was immediately rescued, and on reaching land appeared to be all right, and started on foot for home. On arriving there she commenced vomiting and coughing, and soon her body became terribly bloated, and she was taken delirious. On examination it was found that the violent effort in coughing, had caused an opening in the lung, and the air was escaping. She still lies in a very critical condition.

Southern papers generally alluded in fitting terms to the ceremonies of Memorial Day, and seemed anxious that the extremely emotions excited by the decoration of the graves of the loyal dead should tend to promote kindness, and fraternity and charitable feelings between the North and the South. They apparently realized there was nothing in the simple ceremonies of that day to stir up unkindness, but there was one exception, the Columbus (Ga.) Sun, which said: "There is no objection to anybody decorating the graves of the hirelings who met their deserts while invading this country, but it is not necessary that the business of this State Government should be suspended in honor of the occasion." The time will probably come when even the Sun will be ashamed of this utterance.

FLOUR AND MEAL.—State and Western flour has been in fair demand at an advance of 5@10c. $ bbl. The inquiry has been mainly for the lower grades, particularly for good State Extras, on the basis of $5 15 $ bbl. delivered. Sales have been reported since our last of 16,700 bbls., including poor to choice Superfine State and Western, at $5 10@$5 30; inferior to good Extra State at $5 12½@$5 [illegible] per bbl. shipping brands round-hoop Ohio at $5 [illegible] $ bbl. We quote:

Superfine State and Western	[illegible]
Extra State	$5 15@$5 [illegible]
Extra Illinois, Indiana, &c.	$5 10@$5 [illegible]
Extra Ohio round-hoop shipping brands	$5 10@$5 [illegible]
Extra Ohio, trade and family brands	$5 40@$7 [illegible]
Extra City, shipping	$5 [illegible]@$5 [illegible]
Extra Genesee	$5 [illegible]@$7 [illegible]
Fair to fancy extra Michigan	$5 70@$7 75

The market for Southern flour is rather better disposed to a shade stronger prices; sales have been reported since our last of 700 bbls., in lots, at $5 [illegible] for poor to good Ordinary, and $6 20@$10 for good Ordinary to choice Extra. Rye Flour has been in request at $4 90@$5 75 for Inferior to Choice. Corn-meal continues very quiet at $3 [illegible]@$3 75 for Yellow and White Western; $3 [illegible] for Jersey.

GRAIN.—Wheat has been in lively request, chiefly for export to British, French and German ports, though partly on speculative account, at a further advance of 1@2c. $ bushel on prime No. 2 Milwaukee Spring, which has been in fair request, with buyers; about 10,000 bushels on No. 2 Chicago Spring, 1½c. $ bushel on Amber Winter, which was in quite brisk request. At the close prime No. 2 Milwaukee Spring was freely sought after by shippers, and there was also some call for strictly choice No. 2 Chicago Spring. The receipts have been of moderate extent, consisting of 184,000 bushels Milwaukee Spring, 30,000 bushels Chicago Spring, 5,000 bushels White Western, and 1,000 bushels Amber Western, chiefly at $1 [illegible]@$1 [illegible] $ bushel. Rye has been in good request, partly for milling, and from rather better first hands. Barley has been in fair request for export, and there was also some call for strictly choice malting, which is very scarce. Barley Malt has been in good request, and very firm, with a fair trade. Corn has been active, partly for export, and prices, leading to heavier purchases of both new and old, including about 600,000 bushels, including 200,000 bushels Western Mixed, at 80@80½c. $ bushel, in store and delivered; No. 1 Spring, $1 30@$1 [illegible]; New Mixed Western, at 80@80½c.; Old Mixed, at 81@82c.; 22,000 bushels Western Mixed, for June, at 80c.; 22,000 bushels Western Mixed, for July, at 80½c.; 20,000 bushels Western Mixed, for August, at 81c.; 20,000 bushels Western Mixed, for September, at 81½c.; 20,000 bushels Western Mixed, for October, at 82c.; 20,000 bushels Western Mixed, for November, at 82½c.; 20,000 bushels Western Mixed, for December, at 83c.; To Advertisers.

Advertisers in the TIMES are requested to bring in their notices at as early an hour in the day as possible. If received after six o'clock, it will be impossible to classify them under their proper heads.

☞ For the accommodation of uptown residents, advertisements for the TIMES will also be received at No. 84 West 3d-st., junction of Broadway and 4th-av., and at No. 40 East 14th-st., between Broadway and 4th-av., at same rates as are charged at office of publication.

☞ Messrs. DREXEL, HARJES & Co., Bankers, No. 31 Rue Scribe, Paris, are the authorized agents for the NEW-YORK TIMES in that city.

Notice.

We cannot notice anonymous communications. In all cases the writer's name is indispensable, not for publication, but as a guarantee of good faith.

We cannot return rejected communications, nor preserve manuscripts, unless specially requested so to do.

Our Circulation.

The subscription list and the daily sales of the TIMES are now greater than at any period within the last twelve months, and are rapidly increasing. The fact is mentioned for the information of friends and in reply to the misstatements of enemies.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

EUROPE.

A London dispatch denies that any reports of massacres of Israelites in Roumania have been received there, and says that the Continental news agencies deny that any outrages upon the Jews have occurred in Roumania. A political riot had occurred, according to a Bucharest telegram, at a village in Moldavia, during a local election, which was quelled without the aid of soldiers....The channel match of the Royal Thames Yacht Club took place on Saturday, from the Nore to Dover. No American yachts entered. The winner was Mr. BARICHU's cutter Fiona.... The Chamber of Accusation of the French High Court has passed indictments against forty-seven of those arrested for conspiracy against the safety of the State and the life of the Emperor; against twenty-two for attempt against the Safety of the State; against three for pillage; against one for assassination, and two for inciting to an attempt against the life of the Emperor. They have been remanded for trial....In the Corps Legislatif of France the Left having demanded the right of public meeting during the elections for Conseils-General, OLLIVIER refused, and it was made a Cabinet question and voted on on Saturday. He was sustained by a large majority, and an expected crisis thus averted....ESPARERO has written a letter declaring his determination to refuse the Crown, even if the Cortes decreed it to him. The session of the Cortes in Madrid, on Friday, was devoted to the King question, and by a vote of 136 to 96 it was resolved to take into consideration the proposition that no candidate should be deemed elected unless he receive a majority equal to one-half the full number of Deputies. This action is regarded as equivalent to the defeat of MONTPENSIER, who, it is said, can command but eighty-nine votes....The English captives of the brigands have been rescued and have reached Gibraltar, over which incident there is said to be much rejoicing in London....During the discussion of the schema of infallibility in the Roman Council last week, a violent scene is said to have occurred between the Gallican Bishop MAREY and Cardinal BILIO, in which bitter retorts were made, causing great excitement among the Fathers. Upon the demand of 150 of the Fathers, the end of the discussion on infallibility in the Ecumenical Council was pronounced on Friday. The Ultramontanists deny the rumor that they will withdraw from the Council when the dogma is proclaimed....The Emperor of Austria has issued a decree announcing a universal exhibition to be held in Vienna in 1873.

CUBA.

A Havana dispatch announces on official authority that the expedition from this City on the George D. Upton, which had landed at Punta Brava, a few miles east of Nuevitas, was immediately attacked by Spaniards and gun-boats, and dispersed. Ten of the filibusters were killed, including Capt. HARRISON; two were drowned, and three were made prisoners. The steam launch, rubber rafts, and the cargo of war material, including medicine, was captured, the landing having been successfully effected. The Upton, after the landing, sailed for Colombia, to bring 100 Colombians to join the Cubans. The Voz de Cuba says the prisoners were immediately executed. The date of the landing is not given.

CONGRESS.

In the Senate, Saturday, the morning hour was devoted to a debate on a resolution to allow the Secretary of the Interior to increase the compensation of Assistant Marshals for taking the new census. The pay, it was claimed, particularly in sparsely-settled districts, was not sufficiently large. No action was, however, taken. At the expiration of the hour the subject went over, and the consideration of the Indian Appropriation bill was resumed. In the debate which ensued, the Quaker policy, in connection with the management of the Indians, was discussed at length. The pending amendment, appropriating $50,000 for the purchase of agricultural implements and supplies, for the use of the Indians on the Northern Superintendency, was finally agreed to by a vote of 33 to 12. At 2:40 P. M. the Senate went into Executive Session, and at 6 o'clock adjourned.

In the House, after the transaction of some general business, and the introduction of a bill providing for mail service in the South American ports by subsidizing a steam-ship company, &c., the bill for the reduction of taxation was proceeded with. The final section was agreed to, when Mr. BOUTWELL moved to an amendment the section relating to the navy, modified in various particulars. The House refused to second the previous question, and the amendment was withdrawn; but it was afterward again presented, the previous question seconded, and the main question ordered by a vote of 80 to 32, whereupon the opponents of the measure resorted to the usual filibustering tactics to prevent a vote. During the debate Mr. DAWES, by consent, introduced a resolution, which was passed, amending the law appropriating $50,000 for the survey of the Isthmus of Darien, so as to allow the expenditure under the direction of the War or Navy Departments. No final action was taken on the Tax bill, and at 5 P. M. the House adjourned.

GENERAL.

Advices from Hays City, Kansas, contain the announcement of an attack by Indians on a mail station on Bear Creek, between Camp Supply and Hays City, in which two soldiers were killed and a Sergeant wounded. At a point below the station a Mexican servant had been killed and sixty mules run off. A female interpreter reported at Camp Supply a large number of Arapahoes and Cheyennes on the war-path.

The annual session of the German Roman Catholic Central Society began in Louisville yesterday. There was a grand procession at 10 o'clock. The Society will remain in session for three days. It is expected that 10,000 persons will be present.

During the prevalence of a thunder-storm in Chicago yesterday a barn on North-avenue was struck by lightning and three men instantly killed and one wounded. The men were at work outside when the storm began, and went inside to get out of the rain.

The foundry and machine shop of DENNIS LONG & Co., Louisville, Ky., was destroyed by fire on Saturday afternoon. The loss is estimated at $80,000. The hands, numbering 160, are thrown out of employment.

The drouth in Maine is seriously affecting the lumber interest. A Bangor dispatch represents the heated term as unabated, the thermometer yesterday being at 95° in the shade.

The experiment of supplying water to Beacon Hill, Boston, from Roxbury Highlands, was tried on Saturday, and a stream from the "frog-pond" on the Common, was sent 230 feet high by the pressure from the stand-pipe at the Highlands. The Cochituate reservoir on Beacon Hill, it is thought, may be dispensed with.

By direction of the Anglican Bishop of Montreal and Metropolitan, a special thanksgiving was offered in all Anglican churches yesterday for the deliverance of the country from the recent Fenian raid.

Nearly complete returns from the First District of South Carolina show that WHITTEMORE is returned to Congress by about 3,000 majority. The vote, as compared with that of 1868, when WHITTEMORE was first elected, was very light, only one-half of the colored and one-fifth of the white vote being polled.

The "dry spell" throughout the Northwest, which has existed for the past two weeks, was broken on Saturday night and yesterday by fine showers, which seem to have extended over a large territory.

Snow to the depth of six feet has recently fallen in the mountains of Montana.

The funeral of PATRICK HERNAN, who was killed while engaged in an attack with others on Policeman WILLIAM BURKE, took place yesterday. It was attended by a large concourse of the ruffians of the Fourth Ward with whom the deceased is said to have been identified.

Our Police reports this morning show an unusual number of arrests of men who committed crimes while intoxicated. The free flow of liquor on the Sabbath Day is manifestly not conducive to good order.

How Can we Save the State?

We have never been willing to concede that the Republican Party in the State of New-York is afflicted with a mortal disease, nor that it is hopeless for us to undertake to carry the State next November. We believe that with proper concerted action, conceived in the proper spirit, the victory will still be on our side. The enormous Democratic majority in the recent Judicial election was obtained simply because a large percentage of the Republicans absented themselves from the polls, while our opponents brought up a very large proportion of their usual vote. The official canvass shows this beyond all dispute, and a comparison with the votes of previous years proves conclusively that the Republican Party in the State is really as strong as it was in 1868, and that if it could be roused from its present apathy, the triumph would be ours in November.

How this can best be assured is the question which we propose to discuss now. We have exhausted the investigation into the causes which created Republican apathy, or, if not, we have pursued it as far as it is profitable. We now pass to a more practical inquiry: How can we save the State in the next election? We assume that the difficulty lies chiefly and primarily in this City, and that there are two political elements here which paralyze Republican action throughout the State by making success almost impossible. The first of these is the corrupt Democratic organization known as the "Ring," and the other is the equally discordant, and almost equally venal, class of politicians who seek to rule the councils of the Republican Party. The latter is scarcely less formidable than the former. We venture to make the prediction that if the great body of Republicans who act upon conviction, and have little desire to participate any further than voting, could be assured that they would not be betrayed, and if they could be brought to hope for honest and efficient leadership, they would respond with enthusiasm, and would keep the "Ring" majority in this City down so low that our country friends could easily overcome it.

The first step toward this consummation is to reorganize the party here on some such basis as was attempted last year, although the attempt then proved a failure. We must have but one general Republican organization in the City, in which all the old cliques shall be ignored, and, if necessary, discredited by the State Convention. This accomplished—and it is utterly useless to move until it is—we can carry the organization into every ward and election district, and prepare for the faithful execution of the election laws. If necessary, we can call upon Federal authority to aid in putting an end to the outrages which have been perpetrated by canvassers. A few determined men at each poll, armed with the authority of the law, could secure an honest election. With this assurance before them, thousands of Republicans, who now stay away from what they know to be a mere farce, would gladly go to the polls and vote.

The organization above described must have leaders who will command respect, not only for their recognized ability, but also for their personal and political integrity. In executing the Federal law, the co-operation of the Federal officers in this City must be secured; and to make it effective, those officers must be capable of acting as leaders. This is of the greatest moment. We cannot have third-rate men in first-rate positions. Our local dissensions once healed, and a new organization effected, the answer is found to the question at the head of this article, and Republican success in the State would be secured by legitimate means, without counting upon the co-operation of thirty thousand dissatisfied Democrats, who stand ready to serve their revenges, by open defection, in case the "Ring" shall attempt to nationalize its corrupt tactics, or its ancient policy of exclusion.

Weeding the Debt.

The Committee of Ways and Means have done the next best thing to totally rejecting the funding proposition, which the Senate sanctioned in a most objectionable shape, by discarding the idea of compulsory conversion as against the national banks. They have also refused to sanction the projected system of foreign agencies, and have limited the new issue of bonds to a single rate—four per cent. This is, perhaps, the nearest practicable approach, considering the persistency with which Mr. BOUTWELL has pushed his favorite scheme, to acquiescence in the course which the TIMES has from the first maintained. For it cannot be supposed that a four per cent. bond, notwithstanding its exemption from taxation, has at present the remotest chance of success in the market. No holder of the present six per cents. which are equally free from taxes, will voluntarily surrender them in exchange for a security yielding two per cent. less. And neither branch of Congress has given the slightest sanction to coercion as a means to be employed for the advancement of the funding process. In this respect, a scrupulous regard has been shown for everything affecting the inviolability of the public credit.

The desirableness of funding the debt, at the proper time, is undeniable. The convenience of the Government and the interests of the tax-payers would both be consulted by the issue of a single class of securities at a rate of interest lower than the present. Upon this point there is no difference of opinion. The debatable question is as to the time and order of the change. Those who favor it as an immediate change are the opponents of reduced taxation. They would keep the burdens of the people up to the high-pressure mark, in order that the margin available for the payment of unmatured obligations may be as large as possible. This view exacts, above all other things, a continual diminution of a debt not yet due, and the discharge of which is not asked by a single class of creditors. On the other hand, those who share the opinions of the TIMES, urge that funding can wait, without detriment to the public interest; that the relief to be gained by it is not worth the cost which its advocates are prepared to pay for it; that the best preliminary to its enactment is the adoption of a policy which shall promote the prosperity and contentment of the people; and that no other method will so signally contribute to this result as the largest possible reduction of taxation. "Down with the taxes," is the cry first in order; in due time thereafter we shall certainly fund the debt.

The tardiness with which the Ways and Means Committee have traveled toward this conclusion has provoked not a little grumbling. Their slowness is, however, in some degree atoned for by the result. They have made a good beginning in the work of reducing the taxes, and they have so shaped the Funding bill that we may reasonably hope for still further reduction before Mr. BOUTWELL enters upon his cherished task.

The plea that this country should be able to float securities in Europe, yielding no higher rate of interest than is paid by European countries, is manifestly untenable. The borrowing power of a Government is regulated as to rate by the rates which prevail among its own citizens. A nation whose own people are content with three or four per cent. interest on their spare capital, may expect to obtain what it wants at those rates. But in the United States money is worth much more, and the authorities at Washington must regulate their plans accordingly. The credit they may look for abroad will be measured by the credit they command at home; and the strongest of our financiers have not yet dreamed of issuing or accepting a four per cent. bond. The fact indicates the hopelessness of any effort at present to fund the debt at the rate named, and should reconcile the Treasury to a bill in other particulars differing from the policy urged by the Secretary. The wisest course would now be to drop the subject for the session.

The Redeeming Work of the Session.

A multitude of Mr. SCHENCK's Congressional sins are covered by the vigor and success with which, at the eleventh hour, he has espoused the cause of tax reduction. And the Republican majority in the House, by sustaining his efforts and giving effect to the popular will, have adopted the most effectual method of breaking down hostile criticism, and making sure of victory in the Fall campaign.

The dangers most to be dreaded arose out of the apparent unwillingness or inability of Congress to realize the needs and wishes of the people. Upon this subject, the Press has sent forth no uncertain sound. Months ago it pointed out the diminution of the public burdens as the great want of the time, and it has ever since steadily maintained the same view. To all statements as to the necessity of large and immediate reforms in this direction, Congress seemed indifferent. Questions of minor importance occupied its attention. The representatives of narrow and sinister interests seemed to have ready access to its ear. To the Republican Party out of doors the spectacle was more than disheartening. It looked like mockery of their most cherished hopes. It provoked a suspicion that those on whom the party relied for effective service at Washington neither remembered their responsibilities, nor appreciated their opportunities. Out of this feeling proceeded the loud remonstrances which followed the New-York election, and which have elicited from the House a response the more gratifying, because to some extent it was unexpected.

The reduction of internal taxes has already reached a figure so far in excess of the limit originally fixed by the Ways and Means Committee that it would be ungracious to criticise in an unfriendly spirit every detail of the salutary reform. It is enough that the repeal of some items, and the amendment of others, will remove fifty millions off the shoulders of the people. The lessening of the income tax, the provisions contemplated for divesting its assessment and collection of the features which have rendered it odious, and the repeal of other taxes which fall directly upon trade and transportation, are changes not easily overestimated. They are changes which exhibit a just discrimination as to the sources of internal revenue, and a disposition as quickly as possible to remove from domestic trade the incumbrances which the exigencies of war made inevitable for a time. Fifty millions' reduction in this branch of the revenue service alone will do to start with. Another session, we may fairly hope, will witness the abolition of all internal taxes, with the exception only of the taxes on whisky, tobacco, and the incomes of the well-to-do.

It is, indeed, proposed to take another large step even now. As a part of the general plan for reducing taxes, Mr. SCHENCK has introduced new sections relating to customs duties. These it is intended to reduce to the extent of twenty millions or thereabout. Some duties are reduced,—notably those on tea and coffee; and considerable additions are made to the free list. In the selection of the former items, Mr. SCHENCK has been more or less guided by decisions of the House during the progress of his Tariff bill. It would be easy to object to the schedule now presented. There is room for wide differences of opinion in regard to the reductions, and also in regard to the new features of the free list. From the latter, articles are still omitted which, in our opinion, should be there. But the moment is not propitious for suggesting amendments which, by opening too many avenues to discussion, might endanger the whole of the tariff sections. We take them gladly for what they are worth,—and, as we have said, that is nearly twenty millions. Seventy millions or more, as the result of the House bill for the reduction of taxes, should not be accepted ungrudgingly. So large a reduction of taxation will form the redeeming event of the session.

For this work, let it be remembered, the country will owe scanty thanks to the Democrats, who are evidently unwilling that the Republican majority shall have the credit which will be inseparable from a diminution of taxes. The proceedings in the House on Saturday convict the Democratic minority of a desire to delay, and by delaying to jeopardize, the whole bill. We would not narrow the privileges of the opposition, nor object to the free use of weapons which parliamentary practice sanctions as a check upon the arbitrary action of a majority. But a measure which reduces taxes between sixty and seventy millions does not afford a decent pretext for filibustering, and the Democrats who resort to it confess that they care more for partisanship than for the people.

A Word in Season.

The difficulties in the way of any individual with honorable aims making himself prominent are increasing in the City of New-York, as in London and Paris. The vast crowd of competitors swallows up personality. There are too many objects of attention to allow the multitude to think long of any one person or thing. There is, however, a field open, where any individual of adequate ability and character, could make his name almost immortal in this metropolis. If suddenly, by some strange chance, a man of administrative talent should make his appearance in New-York, and should really and truly be seeking the public interest, and possess organizing faculty sufficient to secure it, we can hardly measure the public honor and renown that would follow him.

What we most sorely need are new men, who will manage their respective departments as a great merchant manages his business, and who possess the rare combination of honesty, organizing talent, and popular power. We believe that any one such man, in any single bureau of our City Government, would win an admiration and respect which, to an ambitious nature, are above the highest rewards; and he would in time be enriched by a grateful community. Let us take, for instance, such a bureau as the Health Board. The comfort, health, and lives of the whole community depend on its wise and energetic action. The new Board starts on its career with no great hopes from the public. There seemed no reason, except one of partisanship, why the old one should have been broken up. Many of the new members have manifestly no experience in sanitary science. Yet the whole public watch their action with the most eager attention, and a readiness to interpret well and applaud whatever is honestly and wisely done. If but one leading member of this Board, say an experienced sanitarian like Dr. STEPHEN SMITH, would set himself thoroughly and actively to work to correct our sanitary abuses, and to make our City, what it ought to be—the healthiest City in the world—boundless applause and public gratitude would follow his labors.

We are approaching our usual dangerous season. The hot weather will soon convert the heaps of garbage in the streets of the Eleventh and Seventeenth Wards into a hotbed of fever and pestilence. The tenement caravansaries in the crowded eastern German quarter will be infected with dysentery, cholera infantum, typhus, and all the throng of human ills which follow heat and overcrowding. There will be the usual terrible mortality of infants. Diseases will soon overleap the barriers of class and fortune, and the wealthy wards feel the infection of the poor. Death will take its easy flight from the alleys of Cherry-street and Corlear's Hook, and appear suddenly in the genteel houses of Murray Hill and Park-avenue. The "fatal bolt," the seed of poison, the fungus of pestilence, or whatever we may call the unseen agency, will come from the same source—the filth, squalor, and neglect in the lanes and tenements of the poor.

What is the new Board doing to ward off these dangers? The old Board, with all its merits, was never able to accomplish one thing—that is, the checking overcrowding in tenement-houses, and residence in unhealthy underground abodes. Much talk was held over these vital reforms, but nothing was ever accomplished. Now, cannot the new Board, without any special act of the Legislature, under the general provisions of their charter, which require it to guard the public health, pass an ordinance that only a certain number of persons shall occupy a given cubic space of room whether as residents or lodgers? It might take the average cubic feet allowed to each person in the London sanitary ordinances, as that would be sure to be small enough, and would, therefore, involve no hardship to the keepers of the tenement-house or lodging-room. Any violation of this ordinance it could prosecute under the general act, or if not, under some existing act. The simple order, however, without punishment, would break up great numbers of these crowded pits and dens, where so much crime and disease are born and nourished. Their wretched inmates would board or reside elsewhere; some perhaps leaving the City for the country; others seeking less crowded quarters.

Then, again, as to the cellar population. If we mistake not, the Tenement-house act gives the Board power to control this evil; and if not, its general act does. Let it take a single ward, the First for instance, and give notice in the coming mild weather, when it will involve no hardship, that after a particular date certain specified cellars (which are usually half full of water and without ventilation) must be vacated. If the order is not obeyed, then let the Board proceed against the owners, or turn the tenants into the streets. They are not fit places for human habitations, and the residents are much better off even in the Station-houses. In point of fact, however, they would find dwellings elsewhere, or emigrate to the suburban districts. Liverpool turned out thus twenty thousand cellar tenants in a single year, and greatly diminished her death-rate. When will the new Board carry out these great and needed reforms?

Suburban Railways.

Now that the Arcade Railroad scheme is laid aside, at least until the objectionable features of its charter are modified, inventors and capitalists have another year before them in which they may devise some safe and effective system of fast City traffic—the greatest want, but one, of the Metropolis. It certainly does seem, after London, for instance, is bridged and tunneled in every direction by good and paying railroads, that engineering difficulties could be overcome here, and that a respectable revenue could be assured, without granting unlimited and dangerous powers to a private company.

But there is a greater want than the want of steam travel in New-York, and that is, cheap and frequent suburban steam travel for thirty miles around the City. This enterprise involves no unusual engineering conditions; its principal works are already in existence, it interrupts no thoroughfares, imperils no massive buildings, cuts off no systems of water supply and drainage, requires no immense expenditure for continuous bridging or continuous rock-tunneling. It, moreover, asks no rights from the City except footholds on its outskirts, and raises none of the difficult legal questions that have so delayed, and must always embarrass, the introduction of steam traffic through New-York.

We have ten principal railroads running out of New-York and its immediate suburbs, to the remoter cities and villages within thirty miles; and despite the slow, infrequent and costly means of transit now provided, the number of people doing business in New-York who prefer these suburban retreats is counted by the ten thousand. Hundreds of residences and groups of residences have grown up, even out of walking distance from stations, so great and wholesome a desire have our people for country life.

If, now, on the present railways, the smaller groups of residences could be connected with the larger outlying towns, by steam carriages or light trains, and these larger towns with the Metropolis by express trains, the time and money of all would be economized. The present trains, carrying three hundred or five hundred passengers each, stop just often enough to be slow and costly to the last endurable degree, and yet they do not stop often enough to really accommodate half the people on the line, or a tenth part of those who would populate it if they could get to stations without keeping horses. And if, instead of our ten roads to the country, we had twenty roads, and a hundred branches, built and equipped, not at the rate of fifty thousand dollars a mile like a trunk line, but following the surface, with a narrow gauge and steam carriage trains—hundreds of square miles of splendid residential country, between the City and Stamford, Tarrytown, Plainfield, or New-Brunswick—a territory large enough to give a house and a farm garden to every business man on Manhattan Island—would be made accessible and become populated.

For suburban railroad traffic we have no means except trunk lines, with their heavy works, ponderous trains, thirty-ton engines and all the appointments for long passenger and immense freight business. The principal trains are made up of locomotives and cars which average 2,000 pounds, dead weight of iron and wood, for every passenger seat in the train. So that each passenger (averaging 150 pounds weight) pays, say, about two mills per mile for himself, and two cents and eight mills for his proportion of this dead weight.

While it is true that railway companies cannot afford to stop their present caravans at every document, it does not follow that they cannot build up and accommodate continuous streets of residences for hundreds of miles, within an hour of this City, by simply adapting their conveyances and branches to the particular service required. There are many of these light railways and steam-carriages abroad—in Sweden, for instance, the rolling stock of such roads weighs but seven hundred to eight hundred pounds per passenger, instead of two thousand, as upon our lines; and yet it moves at the speed of our local trains, and affords equal convenience and safety. Thus suitable means for fast, frequent, and cheap suburban transit have not long since been provided by our existing railway companies, especially since the engineering and the financial questions have been fully worked out abroad, is simply disgraceful to their management.

Juvenile Vagrants.

The old "Board of Charities and Correction" has long distinguished itself by a wise and humane management of the extended charities committed to its charge. The new Board is, up to this time, simply the old Board with one Democratic member added, and a Democratic President, and it has probably a more partisan character attached to it than heretofore. With gentlemen of such well-known character and experience as Gen. BOWEN and Mr. BELL, we may hope that the new organization will not be allowed to become a mere party tool. The experiments they have been trying the past few years in the care of their unfortunate subjects, are of great consequence in connection with the whole science of the treatment of pauperism and crime. They show an intelligence and appreciation of the modern systems of reform which are worthy of all praise. Gen. BOWEN's experiment with the "school-ship," made in spite of much opposition and indifference, has been a thorough success. Its theory is that there are a considerable number among the "bad boys," whose faults have come in a degree from their excess of animal vitality, their love of adventure and excitement, and who, therefore, are not fitted for an ordinary tame "reformatory," but who can be made something of by the stir, bustle, love of honor, and the discipline aboard ship. Their pent-up vivacity can find vent in the work and adventure of the life even on a school-ship, while they secure all the instruction and training of a regular reform school. They come forth also from a several years' course, trained seamen, having learned a profession, and an important one too. Many will naturally henceforth gratify their vagrant propensities in a natural and legitimate way, by sailing over distant seas; and with all, the hot young blood will be somewhat cooled by good steady work in the open air.

The school-ship manifestly would not do for all criminal and destitute lads, but for the hardiest and most adventurous it seems a very proper institution. Among the other experiments of the Commission, we regret that they have never tried one which has been so long needed in this State, and which long since ought to have been commenced by the Houses of Refuge—namely, a "Farm-school Reformatory." The best business for an ordinary lad in this country is that of the farmer and gardener. In this there is always a demand for labor, and fair wages are paid. It takes the boy far from the temptations and vagrancy of a large city. The old world Farm-school Reformatories have been successful far beyond any other. But better even than this, was the method inaugurated by the old Board, and which we regret to hear has been abandoned by the new, of sending the children who were simply destitute and homeless, through the Children's Aid Society, to country homes. The best asylum possible for a homeless or abandoned boy or girl, is the farmer's house, by the influences of which many a poor castaway has been made an industrious and useful member of society.

Congress seems at last to have wakened to a sense of the importance of immediate action upon the leading measures which have so long been pending, and the indications are that important action will be had today. The Tariff bill will probably be pressed to a final vote, and, it is to be hoped, be disposed of in some satisfactory form. Mr. SCHENCK's Funding bill will also be brought up in conjunction with the Currency bill. These important measures will probably absorb the whole day, although it is not likely that the latter will be disposed of. We shall be satisfied if the Tariff bill is got out of the way to-morrow, and trust it may be. Almost any amount of actual accomplishment, which would betoken a disposition and a prospect of getting through by the 15th of July, would be acceptable to the people, and would go far to retrieve the reputation of that body.

The premature promulgation of Gen. BANKS' majority report in favor of a declaration of neutrality between the Spanish authorities and the Cuban insurgents, seems to have stirred up a counter-movement to sustain the Administration in the course heretofore pursued. It is announced that a minority report will soon be presented, by Judge CKEE, which we presume will traverse the conclusion of fact arrived at by Gen. BANKS, that the insurrection has maintained itself sufficiently long and successfully to justify the course which he advocates. We presume the minority report will be sustained, for the House is strongly disposed to sustain the President's administration of affairs, even upon a point which appeals to the popular sympathy so strongly as the Cuban insurrection. The debate will probably be had this week.

Yesterday's Police record, which will be found in another column, contains what ought to be an effective argument in favor of the enactment of a stringent Sunday Excise law in this City. Thirteen cases of violence in various forms are reported, all, or nearly all, the result of intoxication. These include stabbing, shooting, highway robbery, assaults, burglary, and drunken savagery generally. In every case, we believe, the inciting cause of the crime, or attempted crime, is traceable directly to the repeal of the Excise law. If these demonstrations of lawlessness and brutality shall continue to increase in the future in the same ratio that they have since the last Excise law went into effect, our City will be a disgrace to the civilization of the age, besides being positively dangerous on the Sabbath. The cause cannot be removed under the existing law; but our Police and Courts can, if they are so disposed, restrain violence by vigilance and severe punishment, and we call upon them to act accordingly.

Every friend of humanity and religious tolerance will rejoice over the contradiction of the reported massacre of Jews by the Roumanian Christians. The report was probably a gross exaggeration of a comparatively trivial collision which took place last week in a Moldavian village. The very general expression of indignation which it elicited is significant of a changed feeling toward the Jewish people upon the part of Christians, and of a depreciation of the proscription which has been practiced toward them for centuries. Our Washington specials informed us that the President took the only step in his power to secure an official expression of condemnation of the inhumanities which were said to have been practiced.

Senator MORRILL does not seem inclined to yield the question of protection to American shipping without another struggle, but proposes to renew the proposition of Mr. LYNCH's bill, which was defeated last week, in another form. We should have supposed that the emphatic vote already had would have been effectual, but the subject is one of controlling importance to Mr. MORRILL's constituents in Maine, which may explain, if it does not justify, the renewal of the struggle, to the obstruction of other important measures which are pressing for action by Congress.

A great deal has been said about objecting to candidates for public positions on the score of their religious belief. It is very improper to make any such objections in most cases—but who has done it? After all this hue and cry, where is the offender? We published a letter the other day strongly recommending a certain candidate because he was a Catholic. It is generally understood that when a newspaper prints the letter of a correspondent it does not necessarily indorse all his views—and we may have had our own opinions about the fitness of the gentleman recommended by a "Republican." But it suited some of that gentleman's advocates and supporters to represent that we had opposed him on religious grounds—whereas we had merely allowed a correspondent to recommend him very strongly on those grounds. We did exactly the opposite of what was attributed to us. It is very hard to please people who read everything in a crooked manner. A "Republican" is doubtless overwhelmed with remorse at the mischief he has stirred up, and we only hope he will refrain from making any more nominations to the Collectorship. His first choice did not command our assent, while it gave great offense to his favorite candidate's personal friends. Our correspondent had better not interfere any more in politics. He must leave the "parasites" to settle these matters.

We have already adverted to the shortcomings of the "Churches" in regard to missionary effort among the Indians. The Committee of Foreign Missions contains in its late report to the General Presbyterian Assembly at Philadelphia, some statements on the same subject which fully justify our remarks. There can, indeed, be little doubt that an increasing tendency exists in some quarters to treat the Indians as a race fit only to be exterminated. It is reassuring, however, to notice that the Assembly authorized its Board of Missions "to put forth its utmost effort to accomplish the humane and benignant purpose" of bringing the aborigines under Christian influences. The difficulties in the way of such efforts are, of course, great, but considerations of that kind did not check the missionary spirit in the earlier days of Christianity.

The Legislature of Connecticut is discussing the propriety of having but one State capital, to be situated at Hartford, as was the case under colonial rule. The territory now embraced in the State was originally occupied by two colonies quite independent of each other, and known as Connecticut and New-Haven. These, with the Colonies of Massachusetts and Plymouth, formed a union in 1643 under the name of New-England, which was the germ of the federal idea subsequently incorporated in the United States Constitution. Eighteen years afterward the Colonies of Connecticut and New-Haven were forcibly united by charter of King CHARLES II. For many years the public records were kept at Hartford, and the General Assembly met there; but for the last 170 years the sessions have been held alternately in Hartford and New-Haven. Hartford is now desirous of again securing the sole supremacy, and a proposition to submit the question to a popular vote was recently defeated in the Legislature.

AMUSEMENTS.

Miscellaneous Notes.

ANNOUNCEMENTS FOR TO-NIGHT.

The Summer season will be commenced at Wallack's this evening by the performance of Mr. BROUGHAM's new drama of "The Red Light," by the author and an efficient company. At Niblo's the first representation of "Not Guilty" can be attended. The last rehearsal of "The Good-natured Man" takes place at the Fifth-avenue for the benefit of Mr. ROBERTS, the accomplished scenic artist. At Wood's Museum the pantomime of "Hop O' My Thumb" will be interpreted by the MARTINETTIS. The pièce de résistance at the Bowery will be the "Corsican Brothers." Our Brooklyn readers ought to bear in mind the special performances of "The Lancers," by all the artists who acted that piece at Wallack's, at their Academy this evening.

GRAND OPERA-HOUSE CONCERTS.

A concert was given last evening at the Grand Opera-House, with the participation, principally, of the orchestra which Mr. MARETZEK directed at the recent Ninth Regiment Reception. The spacious auditorium was crowded by an assembly in which many known faces were conspicuous. The instrumental music being well selected and interpreted, there was no cause for complaint at its excess over the quantity of vocal compositions. Of the first-named element of the programme, Mr. MARETZEK's new and dashing "Erie Galop" was a part, while ROSSINI, MENDELSSOHN, STRAUSS, MEYERBEER and WAGNER contributed to it, in turn, familiar numbers. The singing of Herr FRITSCH, whose grand voice impressed the hearer quite deeply with a "Salve" by MARSCHNER, and the ad captandum strength of Miss NULLY PIERIS, whose voice is of too good quality and range to be suffered to want for culture, afforded the most evident pleasure of the entertainment. Miss PIERIS sang the "Inflammatus," from ROSSINI's "Stabat Mater," and GOUNOD's "Ave Maria."

BEETHOVEN FESTIVAL.

A very little information is to be added to the notices of the Beethoven Festival already printed in these columns. We are requested, however, to state that the transformation of the Coliseum auditorium into a thoroughly comfortable place having been effected, and the engagements of the numerous artists having been terminated, the sale of tickets will be commenced this day at SCHIRMER'S, No. 701 Broadway; DITSON'S, No. 711 Broadway; DODD'S, No. 814 Broadway, and DITTER'S, No. 9 Wall-street.

WASHINGTON.

The Tax Reduction Bill—The Contest Today—Funding and Banking Measures—Reports on Cuban Affairs—San Domingo—The Shipping Interest—Civil Politics—Revenue Matters.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 5.—The House will open, to-morrow, with a renewal of the fight on the tariff. There will probably be no more serious attempts at filibustering, as even the most rabid Democratic free-trader cannot long withstand the odium of resisting, by such tactics, the passage of a bill which proposes to reduce taxation sixty-five millions. The contest in the morning will be on the vote to lay on the table the motion to reconsider the vote whereby the main question was ordered on the pending section. Should the House refuse to lay the motion on table then the vote will be reconsidered, and an opportunity probably afforded to vote separately on a number of the leading paragraphs of the section—such as iron, steel, hemp, oils, woolen and cotton goods, tea, sugar, and coffee. Should the motion to lay on the table be carried, the section will be agreed to by a nearly unanimous Republican vote, as Gen. SCHENCK says the reduction by the tariff amendment is fully $15,000,000.

THE FUNDING BILL.

Gen. SCHENCK did not get his Funding bill before the House yesterday, owing to the filibustering of the Democrats. It will be expected to-morrow morning, however. It does not contain anything beyond the points already given in these dispatches. An effort will be made to have the funding and currency measures considered together, so that the features of the latter which apply to the banks may harmonize with the class of bonds which shall be authorized by the Funding bill.

THE CUBAN QUESTION.

Gen. BANKS having made his long expected report on Cuban affairs to the newspapers, the other half of his Committee, headed by Judge OTTS, will in a few days present a dissenting report to the House, in which the position of the Administration on this matter will be sustained and its action vindicated. The debate on these propositions will probably open this week.

DOMINICAN ANNEXATION.

The San Domingo treaty is stronger by the votes of two prominent Senators who have come over to its support during the past week. It only needs one or two more converts to insure its passage. One of the latest attempts to manufacture sentiment against the treaty was made last week by the correspondent of one of your contemporaries, which pretends to be friendly to the project and yet gives it a stab at every opportunity. The correspondent manufactured a story about the jobs in the treaty, with which he said it was reported and believed Gen. BABCOCK was connected. He then had the assurance to call upon the President for a vindication of Gen. BABCOCK from those charges. The President, instead of shutting the door in the face of such impudence, condescended to inform the correspondent that he believed Gen. BABCOCK to be an honest man, and that the charges were wholly without foundation.

SHIPPING.

Senator MORRILL, of Maine, will endeavor to secure the passage of a measure for the revival of our shipping interests, by moving it as an amendment to one of the Appropriation bills. It will probably embody some of the features of Mr. LYNCH's bill which failed in the House.

THE MUNICIPAL ELECTION.

The city election, for Mayor and members of the Common Council, takes place to-morrow, and promises to be a very exciting and hotly-contested affair. Some fears of an outbreak are entertained, and Mayor BOWEN is out in a letter of advice to his friends today counseling moderation, forbearance, peace and order. The Police force has also been largely augmented. Many of the leading merchants announce that their places of business will be closed. The candidates, Mayor BOWEN and Hon. M. G. EMORY are both Republicans. The Chronicle supports the former, and the Republican and Star the latter. A large number of Republicans, both black and white, as well as all the Democrats and Conservatives, support Mr. EMORY, and it looks to-night as though he will be elected. But as the leaders on the other side are numerous, active, and some of them very unscrupulous, it is impossible to predict the result with certainty. In either case the colored element will be well represented in the City Government, as both parties have nominated a full proportion of colored men on the ward tickets.

THE ISRAELITES IN ROUMANIA.

The State Department has as yet received no official information in reference to the reported massacre of the Jews by the Christians at Roumania, Turkey. President GRANT paid a visit to the State Department today, and during his interview with the Secretary of State, requested him to obtain full and reliable information in relation to this alleged massacre, and in the meantime to do all in his power to have the Turkish Government stop such persecution.

REVENUE STAMPS.

The following is the number and value of revenue stamps sold by the Revenue Bureau for the month of May:

	Number.	Value.
Tobacco stamps	17,207,970	$2,948,712 14
Distilled spirits stamps	400,000	8,000,000 00
Beer stamps	2,691,324	645,917 76
All other kinds	28,648,945	1,792,978 94
Total value of stamps sold		$13,651,117 05

The Bureau had on hand today near 23,000,000 stamps, the total value of which is nearly $8,000,000.

THE TAX ON STOCK OPERATIONS.

Hon. H. G. STEBBINS, of New-York, is here as the representative of the New-York Stock Exchange to look after the onerous taxes inflicted upon the business in stocks by the new bill. In addition to all former taxes, an amendment to the bill, made in the House, adds 5c to every sale of every hundred shares of stock, which, as Mr. AMBLER avowed his object to be, is literally taxing the business out of existence. When fully understood, it is not likely to avail.

Dispatch to the Associated Press.

DEATH OF A POLITICIAN.

JONAH D. HOOVER died here today, aged forty-eight years. He was Marshal for the District of Columbia under President PIERCE, and previous to the late war was well known in political circles throughout the country, both as President of the Jackson Democratic Association and as a member of the National Democratic Committees and Delegations. He had been in bad health for the last ten years, and was personally highly esteemed by men of all shades of politics.

AFFAIRS IN TENNESSEE.

It is expected that at the next meeting of the Committee on Reconstruction, legislation will be proposed concerning the State of Tennessee. Representatives MAYNARD and STOKES, and other prominent gentlemen who are opposed to the present condition of affairs, ask that Congress pass a law declaring that the Legislature is an illegal body, as they claim the majority of its members were elected against the provisions of the Constitution, blanks with signatures having been circulated by wholesale, and filled with names of persons who were excluded from voting by reason of their connection with the rebellion. It does not seem probable, however, that Congress will have time to definitely act upon the subject, in view of the pressure of other business.

A NORTH CAROLINA UNIONIST.

The Senate Committee on Military Affairs has submitted a report, saying:

"The evidence in this case shows that Lieut. SHELTON, who asks to be allowed pay, recruited and organized a full company of loyal North Carolinians, and was appointed First Lieutenant of said company by Major-Gen. SCHOFIELD, to date 1st day of September, 1863, the day his company was organized. That owing to the unsettled condition of the army in East Tennessee at that time, and the seige of Knoxville soon following, Lieut. SHELTON was unable to be mustered in. After the siege of Knoxville was raised, Lieut. SHELTON was ordered by Gen. SCHOFIELD, with a detachment of his company, to join the Third North Carolina Mounted Infantry to make a raid into the enemy's lines for the purpose of destroying the railroad bridges between Greensboro and Salisbury, N. C., a distance of 300 miles in the rebel lines, which cut off the enemy's communication with Richmond. Lieut. SHELTON remained on duty with the Third North Carolina Mounted Infantry, by orders of Gen. SCHOFIELD, being constantly in front on active duty. His company was full and complete, and there was no other First Lieutenant in said company; and that he never received any pay as said officer. The Committee therefore report a bill and recommend its passage, giving SHELTON the pay of a First Lieutenant of Infantry from Sept. 1, 1863, to Aug. 16, 1866, less payments received as a private."

THE BIBLE IN THE SCHOOLS.

Discourse by Rev. Edward P. Ingersoll in the Middle Reform Church in Brooklyn.

The following sermon was preached, yesterday, by Rev. EDWARD PAYSON INGERSOLL, in the Middle Reform Church, Brooklyn, founded on the subjoined text:

"To the law and to the testimony: if they speak not according to this word it is because there is no light in them."—Isaiah viii, 20.

The American Republic was built upon the Bible. The great fact that stands above all others is the fact that the Bible sent our forefathers to these shores; that it was the Shiloah of their hopes; that it was the right arm of their prosperity. The earliest colonial settlements recognized the absolute necessity of placing the Christian religion as the corner-stone of government. From the pulpit, too, as history affirms, came the first enunciation of those principles that led to this Republican Government. "Thinking upon the passage, (says an old divine,) where the spirit of the Lord is there is liberty, I was brought to reflect upon how good a thing it would be to have a free government." And the free government came; under the sanction of the Christian religion it came. It was born of its spirit; it was baptized at its altars. In the dark days of the Revolution, when it struggled for birth, men acknowledged that it was then fervent first prayer in Congress that brought them deliverance; and in that original Constitution, as it was written when now stands, "Religion, morality and knowledge, being necessary to a good Government and the happiness of mankind, schools and the means of education shall forever be encouraged." "Religion!" What religion is meant? Surely, that which inspired our patriot fathers to renounce allegiance to a foreign potentate. Christianity became the law of the land. Saith BLACKSTONE, "Christianity is a part of the law of England," and in a note to the American edition of his commentaries we read, "We have received the Christian religion as a part of the common law." The Courts of New-York State have affirmed the same. Mr. WHEATON, in his celebrated argument in the Girard case, says, "Christianity is the law of the land." Judge STORY, in his Commentaries on the Constitution, says, "It is impossible for those who believe in the truths of Christianity as a Divine revelation, to doubt, that it is the special duty of Government to foster and cherish it among all its citizens and subjects." Judge THOMPSON, of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, in a judicial decision, says: "Christianity is and always has been a part of the common law of the State. "It is impossible," he adds, "to administer the laws without taking the religion which the defendant in error has scoffed at—that Scripture, which he has reviled as their law." Such, then, is our customs, habits, and the whole history of our nation; everything declares that Christianity, broad, generous, tolerant Christianity, that which is independent of sects and dogmas, of sword and fagot, that which springs from the Bible, is the law of the land. That brilliant Frenchman and conscientious Protestant preacher, Father HYACINTHE, who has but recently left our shores, said, when here: "The foundation of your people is the Bible; the Book that speaks of God; the living Word of Jesus Christ. * * * A belief in Jesus Christ is the root of this nation. * * * I have found here liberty associated with Christianity, and I have seen a people who do not think to be free they must be parted from God." It stands as a fact, then, that this nation is a Christian nation. Its Constitution plants itself upon religion. Laws and customs and judicial decisions have affirmed it. Does it stand also as a necessity? Can there be a free Government without the recognition of a God? Has it ever had been? No human Government has ever existed without a belief in a Divinity, and a national recognition of such a belief. Every nation of antiquity has been closely allied to some religion. Experience has taught that man cannot be controlled without appeals to the religious sentiment. Said WASHINGTON, in his Farewell address: "Of whatever may be conceded to the influence of a refined education upon minds of a peculiar structure, reason and experience both forbid us to expect that national morality can prevail in exclusion of religious principle." It, then, the morality of the State depends upon the inculcation of religious sentiment, does it not rest within the power of the State to train its citizens and those who are to become citizens in religious truth? Has it not the power of self-preservation? May it shut men up in prisons for crime, and yet have no authority to inculcate principles and truths that are the only safeguard against crime? These facts have been given and principles affirmed, because there has been for many years past a systematic effort to exclude the Bible from our public schools, upon the ground that it is not the province or right of the Government to teach religious truth. This effort has been powerfully aided by the Romanists of our country and encouraged by the infidel minds of community, and will be pressed, as long as there is any hope of success. The history of Romanism is a history of silent, persistent effort, where they have not yet the power to rule. Their rallying cry is given, orders passed down the line, and then on to the bitter end they march in solid phalanx. Such an army is now in our land. I do not come to pronounce anathemas or hurl maledictions. I do not sympathize with those who are ready for such quixotic sallies. Our weapons are not carnal. But I do stand with those who think it right to speak out clearly and positively, and cleave the rocks upon which our good ship of State is in danger of running. I would hold to the Bible in our schools, because its truths brought common schools into existence. Its great teachings are the basis of all religion in this land. I would hold to the Bible in impressing those broad foundation truths upon which all Christians acknowledge. Beyond this it is not our right to go. The Bible is its own best interpreter. Like the sun, it reveals itself. It is God's book, therefore it cannot be sectarian. No gift of the Common Father is sectarian. You might as well talk of sectarian rocks and trees, of sectarian soil, of sectarian oceans or stars, of a sectarian sun, as of a sectarian Bible. There can be no ground upon which to base such a charge, except that it is improperly translated. To which we say this Bible was translated under the patronage of a Roman Catholic sovereign, and by Catholic scholars, and was pronounced by Catholic critics of King JAMES' time as the most perfect translation ever made. Says Bishop LAMBERT, himself a Catholic: "It is of all versions the most excellent for accuracy, fidelity, and the perfect letter of the text." And what has done this Bible teach? It teaches one God, one Savior, one Holy Ghost, the forgiveness of sins, the regeneration of the heart of the Holy Spirit, justification by faith, and a future judgement. These are fundamental truths of the Bible; they are held in common by Protestants and Catholics; why then teach them to our children and they to them? Why then would they have the Bible cast out of our public schools? Because it is "without note and comment." Because it does not teach those doctrines which make the Romanist to differ from the Protestant. Because instead of pressing home, as it does, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart and thy neighbor as thyself," it does not make prominent the pros and cons of trans-substantiation, and penance, and fasts, and purgatory, and images. Because while it holds up the commandments against robbing and cheating and bearing false witness, it does not give more emphasis to the teachings of the Roman Church, over which men have been cutting each other's throats for the last fifteen centuries. Their objection is not to the Bible, but to the broad, liberal spirit of our institutions, which permits the open Bible and untrammeled conscience. We seek for our children good citizenship, integrity, industry, manly courage, culture of the mind, refinement of sentiment and feeling, generous impulses and self-denying character. History affirms, and the wise men of the golden age of every Christian land confirm the truth, that all of these characteristics flow in the channel opened up by the Bible. In good citizenship and obedience to law sought the Bible teaches. The apostle says that he was ordained to be a minister of God. "Ye are brethren." This means obedience to rulers and respect for our brother man. It teaches integrity of character—that which stands by the truth in spirit, in word and in deed. From the commandments given on Sinai down to the Apocalypse by example and precept is this characteristic of true manhood pressed with all the holy sanctions of law and love. Industry is inculcated—industry, the right hand of personal and national peace and prosperity. Witness the lots of the Master and his disciples. Hear the Apostle Paul as he says: "These hands have ministered unto my necessities." Manly courage is taught. Look to Abraham, the military hero, battling for his rights. Follow down to Joshua, the intrepid, fearless chieftain, for whom the sun and moon stood still while he smote the hosts of the aliens. Study the exploits of David from the time the bold, true boy met the giant of Gath to the time when his courage and vigor had made Israel the mightiest nation of his day. Follow Jesus in his life-work. Behold the Redeemer, armed in his life-work. Behold he stands up for the poor and lowly; he drives the base traffickers from the temple; he dies at length because he loved the truth. Where is nobler heroism? Look to Stephen and Paul, who went forth in the same spirit; hear the grand old Apostle speak when cowardly rulers would release him: "They have beaten us openly uncondemned, being Romans, and have cast us into prison, and now do they thrust us out privily. Nay, verily, but let them come themselves and fetch us out." Such truths when read are of no influence; such truths fall upon deaf ears. I am one to testify nay. No, multitudes which no man can number have heard these truths in our common schools. Unto souls quick and eager they have passed like particles of iron into the blood, giving us a more stalwart manhood, and through that manhood wise laws and better customs. Where in the records of the past do we find a book that so quickens the soul to lay hold upon the mighty secrets of existence for which Jacob wrestled? The generation which has become wrestled? The generation which has become wise in the things which are not written looks upon the Bible as a relict of the past. They say it is like an old baronial castle with a few rooms furnished for those whose duty it is to keep it. They will live in the grand mansion which science or literature or understanding has created. But thoughtful men, who search deep do not think so. They tell us that as a work of literature the Bible has no equal. WEBSTER, CARLYLE, COLERIDGE, CHALMERS, each expresses the opinion that the inspired Book of Job is the sublimest poem in the language of man. Dr. JOHNSON read the book of Ruth as a company of literary men who were ignorant of the Bible and they pronounced it "the sweetest pastoral they had ever heard." No imagination ever conceived stories which equal in beauty the stories of the Bible. The little child hangs upon your lips as you tell him of Joseph as Moses or David or Samuel. Piper years can to them to be refreshed. There is no book which tells its stories with such plainness and pathos. If you would have culture, put the Bible first. Better burn all other books than be shut out from the Bible. Shall free people, whose glories and triumphs are given and maintained, not by the Constitution as a primary force, but by that great charter of rights which God has granted, hesitate to give the truths to their children? Shall we permit men bound by the edicts of a ruler who hates liberty and loves oppression to snatch away the word of God, which has come down as the heirloom of our fathers? The Saxon Bible—it is a part of our national history; it is the treasure of our national hopes; it is the golden link that binds us to our "mother;" it is the power of grief and tribulations is crushed beneath its words. It stills the tempest. It rebukes the Tempter and he flees away. It is the companion of man's best moments; and all that is gentle and pure, patient, penitent and self-sacrificing, brings him near his English Bible. It is his treasure; he goes to it when the clouds lower away. It has written upon its pages his soul history. Shall he lightly toss it from him at the word of those who glory in trampling it under foot? But our common schools are not alone involved. Our reform schools, our penitentiaries, our benevolent institutions, our State universities, every million of money spent in the land which receives, as have multitudes of them, the help of the State, must banish the Bible. The experiences of years testifies that criminals are softened and reformed by Bible instruction. Says Gen. AMOS PILLSBURY, the efficient and humane Superintendent of the Albany Penitentiary: "I have yet to see a copy of the Bible in every cell, and the prisoners read it through several times. They often express to me their deep interest in its truths, and some have said they find something new in the Bible every time they read it; and the men who do the most work in the shops of the prisons are those who learn most of the Bible!" and he further states that he needs the Bible as much for the discipline and the reformation of the criminals. Our common school teachers testify to the same fact. They say we need the Bible as a moral force in governing our schools. Take the Bible from our blind asylums and its inmates are shut up in Egyptian darkness. They will never learn the blessed truth, "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved;" never trace out as they now do those sublime words, "Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither hath it entered into the heart of man to conceive the things which God hath prepared for them that love him." Banish the Bible from our public schools and the work of desecration is begun. Let the Bible be carelessly giving up the Bible you alienate many of the oldest, wisest and firmest supporters of the common-school system, while you fail to conciliate its enemies but only quicken them to new exactions; away goes the Christian Sabbath, Christian oaths, and Christian customs, and infidelity sweeps over us like a tide of lava. We say take from our common schools all that is intolerant of any sect, but let us by our convictions and our votes stand up for God's Word. And yet were it thrust out I should not give up hope, for our common schools, passing their roots so deep into the soil of the Godhead, drawing their life from its principles, are forever the most formidable foe to priestly intolerance, and so they have been found to be, and hence the issue has shifted grounds; and now, in most places, Romanism insists upon destroying the common-school system. They believe in religion in the State; they proclaim boldly, and with truth, that a State without religion is godless. But they demand the right to teach their peculiar theology and ecclesiasticism. They object to our schools as godless.

Hear what they say. The Freeman's Journal, a prominent Roman Catholic organ, says: "Let the public-school system go where it came from—the devil. What the Roman Catholics must do, what is to get our children out of the devouring fire. At any cost and any sacrifice we must deliver the children, over whom we have control, from those pits of destruction which lie invitingly in their way under the name of public or district schools." Again, "This subject (of the public school) concerns the very whole question of the progress and triumphs of the Catholic Church in this next generation in this country. Catholics! let us all not together! Let us all read and listen to the same sentiments that we may know how to act together!" Again, "There can be no sound political progress—no permanence in the Statesmanship here, for any length of time, children shall be trained in schools without (the Roman Catholic) religion." Again, "This country has no other hope, politically or morally, except in the vast and compact Catholic organization of the Church militant." A Catholic priest in the Boston Advocate says: "Catholics would not be satisfied with the public schools even if the Protestant Bible and every vestige of religious teaching were banished from them." As indicating the aim of this spirit, hear Bishop O'CONNOR, of Pittsburg: "Religious liberty is merely tolerated until the opposite can be carried into effect, without peril to the Catholic world." The Archbishop of St. Louis says: "If the Catholics ever gain—which they surely will—an immense numerical majority, religious freedom in this country will be at an end." This, then, is not a question of party or of partisans. Without round to a party or party influences, men have spoken. It is a question of morality, of education, of liberty, of free salvation for men. And how are we to meet it? Not by sounding the tocsin of war; not by an outcry of indignation; not by vituperations, but by calmness and faithfulness. Let us remember that God founded this nation and that He speaks as truly to us as of old to Israel when He said: "Behold, I have taught you statutes and judgments, even. Keep, therefore, and do them; for this is your wisdom and your understanding in the sight of the nations, which shall hear all these statutes and shall say surely this great nation is a wise and independent people. Only take heed to thyself, and keep thy soul diligently, lest thou forget the things which thine eyes have seen, and lest they depart from thy heart all the days of thy life, but teach them to thy sons and thy son's sons."—Deut. iv. We have been swinging away from the old moorings; we have not been faithful enough in teaching our children the statutes of the Lord. Our hope for liberty is at the hearth stone. "And thou shalt teach them diligently to thy children." "Feed thy kids beside the shepherd's tent." Let us be as vigilant in teaching the truths of Scripture to our children, as Rome is in inculcating her forms and dogmas, and our nation shall rise into a hurher intelligence and nobler virtue. As Italy, and Portugal, and Spain, and other nations of Europe have sat down and crumbling under the yoke of degradation and decay, shall, perhaps, fall still lower in stupor, let America arise and shine. Let her churches and common schools, twin patrons of the purest civilization, multiply and strengthen on every hand. And not bound up within ourselves, let us send the Gospel over the sea. Spain in her palmy prime days gave America to the persecuted. Let us bind upon her crushed heart the balm we have found so precious to our souls. Let us give to her the open Bible. Let us enter the open doors of the far East and give to nations centuries old in idolatry the Gospel of Jesus. Thus blessing the world we shall bless ourselves. We need redder hands for Christian work; broader views of its magnitude and promise, warmer hearts for the cause of Jesus. Then will a holier light stream in upon our land. We shall still meet storms—they will never cease, they may rage more fiercely before He comes to reign, but the ship of State, guided by the Bible, shall ride boldly and safely over the waves of strife, bearing herself proudly with the precious hopes of humanity. The Bible, the Bible is the sheet anchor of our hopes. Give us the open Bible for our homes that love may reign there. Give us the open Bible for our common schools that intelligence and virtue may still be the heritage of our land. Give us the Bible for our Legislative halls so that "our officers may be peace and our exactors righteousness." God speed us on our way!

"Thou, too, sail on, on Ship of State!
Sail on, oh Union, strong and great!
Humanity with all its fears,
With all its hopes of future years,
Is hanging breathless on thy fate!
We know what master laid thy keel,
What workmen wrought thy ribs of steel,
Who made each mast, and sail and rope,
What anvils rang, what hammers beat,
In what a forge and what a heat
Were shaped the anchors of thy hope!
Fear not each sudden sound and shock,
'Tis of the wave and not the rock;
'Tis but the flapping of the sail,
And not a rent made by the gale!
In spite of rock and tempest's roar,
In spite of false lights on the shore!
Sail on, nor fear to breast the sea!
Our hearts, our hopes, are all with thee;
Our hearts, our hopes, our prayers, our tears,
Our faith triumphant o'er our fears,
Are all with thee—are all with thee!"

Rev. Dr. Bellows on Church Councils.

The congregation of All Soul's Church (Dr. BELLOWS) will, for the present, worship with the congregation of the Church of the Messiah, (Dr. HEPWORTH's.) A defect in the supports of the former church has necessitated the change. It is expected that Dr. BELLOWS' congregation will be enabled to resume worship in their own edifice by next September. The two pastors alternate in taking charge of the services. Last evening Dr. BELLOWS delivered what he called a lecture, rather than a sermon, on the general subject of Councils. In the early contests the Popes had not claimed infallibility. Common sense was not the sense which was common, but that which was in common. He who possessed it was facile princeps among men. The early councils sought to apply this principle to matters of general interest. In former councils priests, men of affairs, princes and men of state were called in. But the present Ecumenical Council is not formed on the old apostolic model. No secular wisdom was represented. The Greek and the Protestant Churches were excluded. It was an assembly of Roman Catholic Bishops and priests, and spoke directly to the assembled council at all. It was a mere ecclesiastical assembly. No general council could now be called to discuss the articles of the Christian faith. The Church was too large, and no common tongue prevailed. Through a general council could not be held, several councils could be. Each individual should hold a council in his own mind. He should look at the principal elements for forming a broad Christianity. The reverend speaker considered at length what was essential for ascertaining what is fundamental for true Christian faith.

The music by the united choirs of the two churches was especially noticeable for its excellence.

THE THEATRES OF NEW-YORK.

Work of the New-York City Sunday-School and Missionary Society Among the Masses—Efforts to Elevate the Lowly, and Furnish Missions for the Churches—Gleanings from an Annual Report.

That the City of New-York is sadly deficient in the matter of church accommodations for the masses, is a fact too well known to require argument for its support. A low estimate of the number of those thus unprovided is 200,000, and it is probably much greater. How to supply this deficiency and give everybody an opportunity to go to church, has long been a serious question with the religious community, and various plans have been devised to meet the want. Some have done well, and others have utterly failed. All combined have not accomplished a tithe of what it is thought possible to do, if all energies were bent toward the one effort of Christianizing our "home heathen object."

Some of these enterprises have done more in the matter, however, that the New-York City Sunday-school and Missionary Society, whose annual report for the past year is nearly ready for distribution.

The Society was incorporated by an act passed April 14, 1826. By its constitution its membership embraces all laborers in the Sunday schools connected with the Methodist Episcopal Church in the City of New-York, the Bishops, the Ministers of the general churches, and the Presiding Elders of the New-York Districts of the New-York and New-York East Conferences.

The management is vested in a Board of Managers elected annually, consisting of the officers of the Society, the pastors of the several Methodist Episcopal Churches, of one delegate from each Sunday-school, (elected by the officers and teachers of said school), and of ten additional members elected by the Board. The regular meetings of the Board are held on the second Friday afternoon of each month. The President of the Board are at the Society's rooms in the new Methodist Publishing and Mission Buildings, corner of Broadway and Eleventh-street. These rooms were fitted up and neatly and thoroughly furnished about six months since, through the generosity and ability of the Corresponding Secretary, President, and by him presented for the use of the Society.

Sunday-school and Mission Chapel services have been conducted by the Society in Thirty-fifth-street near Fifth-avenue; in Franklin-street, near Varick; Hudson; at No. 232 Broome-street, near Mulberry; corner of Broadway and Sixty-eighth-street; at Sixty-first-street, between Second and Third avenues; at East Sixty-second-street, near Avenue B; in Second Avenue, between Seventy-second and Seventy-eighth streets; in Avenue B, between Sixteenth and Seventeenth streets; at corner of Third-street and Avenue D; at No. 14 Rivington-street, near Lewis; at No. 67 Bleecker-street, near Mulberry, and in Thirty-second-street. A new chapel has been erected, on lots purchased and paid for, in One Hundred and Fourth-street, near Ninth-avenue. It is a neat Gothic structure, with three gable ends, and is designed to remain the permanent lecture-room for the future church. This chapel was completed, and was ready for dedication, on the last Sabbath in February, but the opening exercises were postponed until the return of the Bishop, the President. The dedication took place on April 3.

The Society now holds, free from debt, real estate, consisting of chapel lots and chapels, estimated at $134,000, and movable and other property valued at $11,382, making a total of $145,382. There are under the pastoral care of missionaries eleven organized churches, the members of which are divided into twenty-five classes, which meet weekly. During the year 1869 there have been 1,404 additions to the mission meetings. The losses to the membership by death and transfers, and transfer of societies to separate congregations have been 416. Since the last Annual Report Forty-second Church has been constituted a separate charge, taking from the membership of the mission 52, and from our Mission Sunday-school teachers, 78 pupils. The mission church in Forty-second-street, which has under its supervision 12 Sunday-schools, with a total register for the year of 925 officers and teachers, and 2,938 scholars, or a total Sunday-school membership of 3,863.

Six missionaries have been employed during the year, namely, Revs. D. L. Marks and J. F. Richmond, of the New-York Conference; Revs. Geo. Hollis and Wm. Ross, of the East Conference, and Revs. Geo. G. Bridges and H. Gedman, local preachers. In addition, Revs. Geo. Griffith and D. Young, of the Drew Seminary, have been employed to fill Sabbath appointments, the former for six months, the latter for the year. One female missionary, Miss A. Lozee has also been employed for a special department of labor. The work performed by these faithful and successful laborers is indicated by the following figures: Missionary and pastoral visits, 13,626; average per month, 2,935; visits to the sick, 1,153; families prayed with, 1,464; religious services held, 1,323; visits to Sunday Schools, 760; pages of tracts and other tracts distributed, 36,420; funerals, 115; baptisms, 110; conversions, 201; children promised to attend Sunday School, 1,622; adults promised to attend church, 1,598.

In addition to the regular work of the Society, much of the Society has been largely promoted by the personal services of the President, Vice-President, and several other officers of the Board. Numerous visits, extensive addresses, have been made by them in behalf of Sunday-schools and congregations, and they have devoted no small amount of time in superintending and aiding the previous work of their charge. The officers and teachers of the Mission Sunday-schools have also labored with wisely-directed zeal. During the year the Society has received $20,246 05, and expended in the Mission and Sunday-school work, $20,114 42. During the last four years the Society has expended in the work of its mission $80,000 22.

The Society numbers among its officers and Board of Managers some of the most enlightened and influential men in this City, as may be seen by the following record: President—ABRAHAM V. STOUT, President of the Shoe and Leather Bank. Vice-Presidents—Chas. H. Applegate, G. J. Hamilton and J. D. Slayback. Recording Secretary—James H. Pelton. Treasurer—Wm. K. Peyton. Elected members—Daniel Drew, C. C. North, John B. Cornell, Rev. D. Curry, D. D.; Rev. Wm. H. De Puy, A. M.; D. W. Drew, John Stephenson, Gilbert Oakley, J. S. McLean and Abraham Lent.

The expenditures of the coming year will necessarily be very large, and an appeal is made to the public for aid in carrying on the work. One million of dollars could be well expended, in opening new missions and building churches, within the next twelve months. Those who are disposed to help this worthy Society by contributing money may forward it to the Treasurer at Nos. 273 and 274 Bowery, or to any other officer. The funds will be judiciously applied, and great good may be effected.

Open-Air Services at the Five Points.

The open-air services at the Ladies' Five Points Mission, at 4 o'clock yesterday, were attended by a crowd of people not accustomed to public worship. Nearly all of the women were barefooted, and not a few of them had their babies in their arms. The men were dirty, rough and ragged. The children were those, for the greater part, who attend the Sunday-school of the Mission. Rev. Mr. MESERVER, of Forty-fourth-street M. E. Church, preached an excellent sermon from the third chapter and twenty-sixth verse of Acts. Meanwhile the motley group of hoodlums loitering in the immediate vicinity of the stood unsheltered in the hot sun, listened attentively. While the preacher was urging them to personal piety, one young fellow said to another near him, "Are you going to let Christ come into your heart?" The other looked puzzled and shook his head. The two locked arms and walked away. The people usually seem delighted with the singing by the ladies and children, and at the close were earnestly invited by the missionary to come again.

Anniversary of the Greenpoint Sabbath-Schools.

The Sabbath-schools of Greenpoint will celebrate their anniversary to-morrow. The various schools will assemble in their respective school-rooms at 1½ o'clock, preparatory to marching. The march will commence at 2 o'clock precisely. The Marshals will have their schools formed as follows, ready to take the places assigned them, when the procession reaches their school-rooms:

Faith Mission, on the west side of Union-avenue, right resting on Meserole-street; Union-avenue Baptist, on east side of Union-avenue, right resting on Meserole-street; Christian, on south side of Calyer-street, right resting on Union-avenue; Lutheran, on north side of Calyer-street, right resting on Union-avenue; the Tabernacle Methodist, on east side of Union-avenue, left resting on Calyer-street; the Presbyterian, on south side of Noble-street, right resting on Union-avenue; First Baptist, on north side of Noble-street, right resting on Union-avenue; the Episcopal, on north side of Kent-street, right resting on Union-avenue; the Reformed, on the north side of Java-street, right resting on Union-avenue; the First Methodist, on Union-avenue, left resting on north side of Java-street.

The procession will march from the corner of Union-avenue and Meserole-street through Union-avenue to Eagle-street, through Eagle-street to Franklin, through Franklin to Calyer, up Calyer to Fourth, through Fourth to Norman-avenue, through Norman-avenue to Oakland-street, through Oakland to Meserole, through Meserole to Fourth, through Fourth to Calyer, through Calyer to Union-avenue, through Union-avenue, dismissing schools in their order.

CHARLES KENNEDY will act as Grand Marshal, with the following aids: George H. Stone, William Clark, J. S. Ogilvie, Henry Starr, Joseph Bigelow, H. Koepsem, J. H. Whitehorne, Joseph T. Van Note, I. L. Doughty.

The Law Courts for June.

As published in the TIMES a few days since, the Governor of the State, in making assignment of Judges to hold the General Terms of the Supreme Court in the several districts, in pursuance of a recent act of the Legislature, appointed Presiding Justice INGRAHAM, and Judges BARNARD and CARDOZO, for the First District, and the day for the commencement is the first Tuesday (to-morrow) instead of the first Monday of the month, as heretofore. Judge BARNARD is also assigned to hold the Supreme Court Chambers this month, commencing today. Judge EDMONDS will commence a two weeks' term today, at Part A. M., of Circuit Part II., in the General Term room.

In the Superior Court, General Term, Judges MORRIS, MCCUNN and JONES will preside.

Part I. Trial Term, will be held by Judge SPRONCL, and Part II. by Chief-Justice BARTLETT.

Judge FULLERTON will sit at Special Term and Chambers.

The General Term of the Common Pleas has adjourned to the first Monday in July, when they will render decisions, and when probably the assignments of the new Judges for the Fall Terms will be arranged.

In Part I. Trial Term, Judge LEDOW will preside, Judge VAN BRUNT in Part II., and Chief-Justice DALY in Chambers.

The Marine Court has more than the usual heavy calendar for the month. There will be two Trial Terms held by Judges ALKEN and QUINN, and a Special Term and Chambers by Judge GREEN.

THE EDUCATION OF WOMEN.

A Heterodox Sermon Before the Graduating Class of Rutgers' Institute.

Rev. Dr. PIERCE, President of Rutgers' Institute, preached a discourse before the graduating class of the Institute, in Rev. Dr. CROSBY's church, last evening. The church was filled with a large and highly intelligent congregation. The speaker commenced by saying that although he was to speak more particularly to the class which was about to enter upon the active duties of the world, yet the subject of his address was of interest to the public at large, and to that public as much as to the graduates before him would his remarks be directed. The equality of all people before God, said he, is taught in the Scriptures. From this logically follows, and with the sanction of the same divine oracles, the equal principle of the equality of all the people before the law. It, then, the law of the land create privileged classes, such for instance as orders of nobility, on whom it bestows powers not given to others, it makes distinctions that are repugnant alike to the teachings of Christianity and of experience. The utter rejection of this part of the Constitution of the Constitution of the United States, was a great step in the progress of Christian civilization, and is soon to be followed throughout the world. But if the State fulfills its duty to a part of the people in the bestowment of that which is a benefit for them to receive and a duty for the State to give, and does not for the same for the whole, or, if it does this for such other part in a lesser degree, the neglect of these, or its less complete fulfillment of its duty toward them against whom it thus discriminates, this is in the nature of a wrong, and tends to create an inequality among those entitled to equal treatment, which is the second injustice of the condition which was meant to be wholly repudiated and forever banished from this country. Precisely this has been done by the State in the matter of the education of women, and by the community in copying the example of the State. I deem it entirely appropriate to the Sabbath evening and to this house of worship, to argue the following proposition: That while the State, in granting great sums of money for the education of men, and the community in imitating, in this, the example of the State, have done well; yet in so much as both have failed to do so equally for women, this less complete fulfillment of public duty is not only a great wrong to a part of the community, but a great harm to the whole, as it directly fosters an inequality which is repugnant to Christianity and to the best interests of society. I shall attempt to show that in this matter there is a great wrong to be righted, and a great duty to be done. I shall trace this wrong as the ground of an appeal for the endowment of a College for women in the City of New-York, as thoroughly appointed in all respects as the best institution for the education of men in the State. I am fully persuaded that the time is not far distant, when it will be thought almost incredible that the question of the inferiority of women could ever have been seriously debated. I am fully persuaded that upon all great questions touching humanity the human mind will, at length, accept the teachings of Christ as final; and the question whether or not women is the equal of man I conceive authoritatively settled by Him, when He pronounced marriage indissoluble except for the cause of adultery, and thus recognized the essential inferiority in one of the parties. His ideal of marriage, unknown alike to the classical nations and to the Hebrews, is incompatible with the inequality of the sexes. Equality, though it excludes the idea of inferiority, is consistent with diversity. There is a difference between the sexes, as great, perhaps, as question whether there should not be a difference in their education. After the most careful thought that I could give the subject, I am of the opinion that it should be the same to a much greater extent than most persons are willing to concede. Up to a certain point the education of men is much the same; beyond that point comes in a special training. Thus, on leaving college, the young man who is to pursue law receives a legal training. But the great fact here to be noticed is, that up to a certain point, liberty is the element by which to train and develop the same manner. For a long time, a liberal education seems to take no note of the specific ends which, finally, it may be desirable to aim at. It contents itself with enlarging and strengthening the mental powers. It unrolls before the young man the panoramic page of knowledge, confident that this is the best preparation for any path that he may finally choose. If, then, it is best for the young man that, by a liberal education, his memory should be strengthened, his reasoning powers disciplined, his judgment matured, his mind enlarged—why, if it is not best for the young lady? Surely there is nothing which the undergraduate learns in his college course which he should not be glad that his wife should know as well as himself. Surely, a liberal education has miserably failed of its aim, when a man desires in a wife, not an equal, but a toy or a slave. To the savage, woman is a slave. To the sensualist, she is a toy. Out of this the idea of woman as a toy. This is as unchristian idea; unhappily, it is too common even with us, yet, with some other degrading ideas, it is a relic of heathenism. The whole difference between civilized Europe, half-civilized Asia, and savage Africa, can be accurately measured by the idea of woman. The idea of woman is either a nation or an individual. There has been much discussion as to the present condition of woman; and various schemes for her improvement have been ear

REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS.

The week that has past has been quite an unusual one in the Real Estate market, particularly so for this season of the year. The transactions at the Exchange have been large, and of such a nature as to attract public attention, while the results cannot fail to have an influence on the future. The prices obtained for City lots belonging to the Dyckman estate, sold on Wednesday and Thursday last, were good, and the sale was remarkable from the fact that all the lots, 903 in number, were sold to bona fide purchasers, at an average of over $400 per lot. In this connection it must be borne in mind that, although the streets are marked out, they are not yet laid out, and the owners of this property must in time pay on it large amounts in assessments for taxes, grading, paving, sewerage, pipe laying, &c. Some years must also necessarily elapse before the lots will be required for building purposes, and when all these necessary expenditures are considered, some estimate can be formed of the real value of the property in this vicinity. A reason why the water-lots on the property sold brought such large figures, will be found in a great measure owing to the improvements now in progress for the benefit of navigation in Hell Gate channel, which, when accomplished, will render them particularly desirable for the construction of docks, &c. Another fact was also demonstrated at this sale—namely, the desire of capitalists to acquire possession of lots on Manhattan Island. To this end a strong competition was shown, the result of which was the good prices obtained. Although rents have fallen, and improved property is lower in value than for several years past, still, lots are in demand, for the reason that each one occupied correspondingly decreases the number left in the market, upon which, it is claimed, buildings can now be erected at a much less cost than formerly. The fall in rents, and the decrease in the price of labor and materials, renders it possible to put up new buildings, and to rent them at a profit, that will more than offset the decrease in rents for houses constructed in high-priced times, especially during the war. During this time is the general opinion of trustees and contractors, will be found to be the fact, upon consulting the list of proposed new buildings published each week in the TIMES, which shows that the business is largely on the increase when compared with the last two or three years. It is rumored that another sale is to come off early in the Fall of another section of the Dyckman estate, which will be divided into lots and offered to the public on similar terms as characterized the sale of last week.

In addition to the above sale ROBERTS & McGUIRE, last week at the Exchange, disposed of a large lot of City property at good advantage, as did also A. J. BLEECKER, SON & CO. Good sales were also made by A. D. MELLICK, Jr., & BROTHER, of property at Bloomfield, N. J., and by R. H. LUDLOW & Co., of property on Staten Island. Out of town, JOHNSON & MILLER had a very successful sale at Linden Park, Staten Island, and A. D. MELLICK, Jr., & BROTHER at Passaic, N. J.

This week promises also to be a busy one, and the sales announced are as follows: Today, at noon, on the ground, A. D. MELLICK, Jr., & BRO. sold ninety eligible villa plots overlooking Dundee Lake, at Passaic, N. J. This property is but forty minutes' distant from New-York by the Erie Railway and will be located, the lake is a beautiful one, three miles in length, furnishing facilities for fishing and boating, and the lots are deemed as desirable as any in this section. Persons wishing to attend the sale will take the 10:15 A. M. train, for which excursion tickets have been issued, and a collation will be spread on the arrival of the train.

To-morrow, (Tuesday,) on the premises at noon, LAWRENCE, OAKLEY & FLEURY sell 231 valuable lots, located at Flushing, Long Island. These lots are within five minutes' walk of the depot, and distant thirty minutes from New-York. The terms of sale are easy and the lots will be sold without reserve to the highest bidder. Free tickets are furnished to those who desire to be present at the sale, and all such will take boat at Thirty-fourth-street, East River, 10½, or James-slip, 10½ A. M., thence by special train direct to the property.

To-morrow, also, at 10 A.M., at the vestibule of the City Hall, B. P. FAIRCHILD, under the direction of the Department of Public Works, will sell all buildings and parts of buildings taken by the Commissioners of Estimate and Assessment, appointed by the Supreme Court, for the widening and extension of Laurens-street, from Canal-street to Waverley-place, in the City of New-York.

On Wednesday, on the ground, at 4 P. M., MALLORY & BLACKWELL sell, at Tarrytown, the "Knowlton Place," consisting of a brick house in good order, together with one and one-half acres of land. The property is near the depot, and in other respects well situated. Parties can leave New-York on the 3 P. M. train, and return after the sale on the train arriving in New-York at 6¾ P. M.

On Friday, at the Exchange, A. J. BLEECKER, SON & CO. sell a large property located at Tremont, in Westchester County. The property is a part of the Abraham Basaford estate, and consists of about 130 finely-situated City lots, which will be disposed of in plots of convenient size.

The sales of City property at the Exchange during the past week amount to the large sum of $769,850. The number of transfers for the same time is 211, representing property valued at $3,307,643.

The sale of A. D. MELLICK, Jr., & Brother, of lots at Passaic, N. J., on Saturday last, was well attended and the results entirely satisfactory. About 200 persons were present from this City. All the lots offered were disposed of, and the total sales amounted to $25,815. Each lot as noted below is 25x100. The following is a detailed statement of the transactions:

O. H. PIERSON, Auctioneer.

BY A. D. MELLICK, JR., & BRO., auctioneers and dealers in New-Jersey real estate, No. 6 Pine-st., New-York.—SATURDAY, June 11, at 1 P. M., on the premises.

Positive sale of the Mulligan estate, fronting on the Passaic River, near Belleville, N. J., by order of Jas. E. Wilson, Esq.

Comprising thirteen building plots, varying in size from two to eight acres.

Handsomely situated on very high ground and commanding extensive views of the river and surrounding country. This is a rare chance to purchase property in large plots, as the location is a most beautiful one, and the vicinity handsomely improved; stations on Morris and Essex, Central, Delaware, Lackawanna and Western, and Newark and Paterson Railroads will lie near this property.

Parties wishing to attend this sale will take the 12 M. train by the New-Jersey Railroad from the foot of Cortlandt and Desbrosses-sts., or the 1 P. M. train at Centre-st. station, Newark, and taking steam-boat from the foot of Centre-st., direct to the property.

FIRST MORTGAGE
50 YEAR CONVERTIBLE BONDS,
A LIMITED QUANTITY FOR SALE
AT 90 AND ACCRUED INTEREST.

The greater part of the road is already completed, and shows large earnings, and the balance of the work is rapidly progressing.

We unhesitatingly recommend these Bonds as the safest and best investment in the market.

United States Five-twenties, at current prices only, return 8 per cent. interest, while these pay eight and one-quarter per cent. in gold, and we regard the security equally good.

A SAFE INVESTMENT.

First Mortgage Bonds of the Chicago, Cincinnati & Louisville Railroad Company.

These bonds are part of the first and only issue of the Company for $1,000,000, covering the entire property, and only half of the road is built, yet the whole amount $600,000 have been already placed, leaving but $400,000 to be sold. They are 7 per cent. coupon bonds due in 1887, interest payable 1st January and July in gold, and are issued in coupons of $100. It is 72 miles long, extending from Lake Erie on the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern to Paris, where it connects with the Toledo, Wabash and Western and the Toledo and Indianapolis Railroad; it runs through one of the finest sections of Indiana, and makes a connecting link in the best through line from Chicago to Indianapolis, and thence to Cincinnati and Louisville.

We commend this offer of these bonds as a safe investment, AS THE NET EARNINGS OF THE ROAD FROM THE OPENING HAVE BEEN IN EXCESS OF THE INTEREST ON ITS BONDED INDEBTEDNESS, AND ARE STEADILY INCREASING. Besides it is designed to extend the Road to Lake Michigan at New Buffalo or Michigan City the coming season, which will also greatly increase its earnings.

GENTLEMEN: I beg leave to inform the trade and the public in general that I propose to sell at public auction, through Messrs. J. H. DRAPER & CO., at their store, No. 128 Pearl-st., Hanover-square, New-York, on FRIDAY, June 24. WEDNESDAY, July 13.
WEDNESDAY, June 29. WEDNESDAY, July 20.
WEDNESDAY, June 22. WEDNESDAY, July 27.
THURSDAY, June 23. THURSDAY, July 28.
WEDNESDAY, June 29. WEDNESDAY, Aug. 3.
my entire stock of good packages of the following well-known goods:
JULES MUMM & CO., CHAMPAGNE,
ESCHENAUER, BRENCKEN & CO., LOUIS UZAC & CO., BORDEAUX, CLARETS, SAUTERNES, OLIVE OIL,
A. C. GODARD, COGNAC BRANDIES, in glass and wood.
All these goods will be offered at each sale at the agent's cost price, in full assortment, and in small or large quantities to suit purchasers. An opportunity will thus be offered to the TRADE, HOTELS, RESTAURANTS, STEAMBOATS, CLUBS AND PRIVATE FAMILIES, to obtain their supplies from week to week, without investing large capital and loss of interest. Every article offered at this place will be guaranteed by me, and I desire to state that never were better wines shipped to America than those to be offered at these weekly sales. The clarets and brandies were selected by me in Bordeaux, Medoc and Cognac during my last visit to Europe. The finer wines have been four to five years in bottle. The champagne, "Dry Verzenay," extra dry and private stock of Jules Mumm, was a lot of the superior vintage of 1865.
In conformity with the above, I respectfully announce the first sale of the season,
On FRIDAY, June 10, 1870, at 12 o'clock noon,
At the store of
Messrs. J. H. DRAPER & CO.,

PUBLIC NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN by the Commissioners of the Sinking Fund of the City of New-York that, pursuant to the provisions of the act entitled "An act to authorize the construction of a continuous iron railway, with a double track, and in certain other streets and avenues in the City of New-York," passed April 26, 1870, they will sell at public auction, in the "Governor's Room" of the City Hall, in said City, on the 12th day of July, 1870, at 12 M., to the highest bidder for the money, the franchise, privilege and franchise to construct, operate by animal power, and use a railroad with a single or double track in the streets and avenues, and to be operated thereon for conveyance of passengers through upon and along the following streets or avenues, route or routes, in the City of New-York, viz.: Commencing on the North or Harlem River, at the foot of One Hundred and Thirteenth-street; thence through and along One Hundred and Thirteenth-street with a double track, to Manhattan-street; thence through and along Manhattan-street with a double track, to One Hundred and Twenty-fifth-street; thence through and along One Hundred and Twenty-fifth-street with a double track, to the East or Harlem River; also, from One Hundred and Twenty-fifth-street, through and along Lenox-avenue, to connect with a double track to the Harlem Bridge; also, from the Third-avenue, thence through and along One Hundred and Thirty-fifth-street, with a double track, to Lenox-avenue; thence through and along One Hundred and Twenty-fifth-street at its intersection with Tenth-avenue; thence westerly, through and along the Tenth-avenue, with a double track, to the terminus of said railroad, with the right to use the necessary depots, stations, turnouts and switches, for the proper working and accommodation of the said railroad, on the said streets or avenues, route or routes, said road to be completed within two years from the passage of said act, through upon and along the Tenth-avenue, and upon and along said avenue as far as the same shall be opened, graded and paved, from One Hundred and Twenty-fifth-street. Such sale will be conducted in the corporation office, in said City, and the person or corporation who shall offer to pay into the City Treasury the largest sum of money for such right, privilege, or franchise, shall receive from said Commissioners a certificate to the effect that he is or they are entitled to such grant, and are authorized to construct, operate and use the same in accordance with the provisions of the said act; such certificate to be based on the bid made at such sale, and the transfer of any Treasury of the amount of the bid and of the execution of a bond to the Mayor, Aldermen and Commonalty of the City of New-York, in the sum of two hundred and fifty thousand dollars, by two good and sufficient sureties, to be approved by the Comptroller of said City, for the faithful performance of the work by the person receiving such certificate shall, within two years, finish and complete said road and equip the same with the requisite number of cars and horses, except along Tenth-avenue, and upon and along said avenue, to be restrained or prevented by any legal proceedings from completing and constructing the same, the time for which they are so restrained shall not be deemed or taken to be part of the time in which the said road is to be completed. But the Commissioners of the Sinking Fund are authorized and reserve the right to reject any bid, if, in their judgment, it is not for the interest of the City to accept the same. Dated this 2d day of June, 1870.
JOHN MOORE, Chairman Finance Committee, Board of Aldermen.
NICHOLAS HAUGHTON, Chairman Finance Committee, Board of Assistant Aldermen, Commissioners of the Sinking Fund.

THE CITY WITHOUT A SABBATH.

The Results of Repealing the Old Excise Law Made Apparent.

Great Increase of Disorder—Knives, Revolvers and Slung Shots in the Hands of Drunken Men—Stabbing and Shooting—Minor Offenses—A Startling Record.

Yesterday was remarkable for the number of assaults, robberies, and other crimes, that were committed in this City, the new Liquor law proving the principal cause of this sudden increase in the disorder and crime coming to the knowledge of the Police. We present the simple record of the day; the facts speak for themselves.

At 12½ o'clock yesterday morning JOHN MCKEEFE, aged eighteen, was found at the corner of Greene and Grand streets suffering from a severe stab wound in the right hip, which he had received at the hands of a strange man. He was cared for by the Police and sent home.

At an early hour yesterday morning as DAVID F. LILLIO, of No. 447 Canal-street, was standing in that street, near Sullivan, he was suddenly assaulted by EDWARD CARPENTER and a confederate, who knocked him down and robbed him of $7. CARPENTER was arrested soon after, and when brought before Justice SHANDLEY, at Jefferson Market, was remanded for trial. The other highwayman made good his escape.

JAMES MCCARTY and JOHN COLLINS were arrested early yesterday morning in the Fourth Ward for disorderly conduct, and when searched at the station-house each was found in possession of a knuckle-duster. Both were arraigned before Alderman MOORE, at the Tombs, and remanded for trial.

JOHN MAY committed an assault upon JOHN B. O'CONNER, of No. 78 Crosby-street, a printer, who was severely wounded on the head. The affray occurred in New-Chambers-street, and O'CONNER is at Bellevue Hospital. Alderman MOORE held MAY for trial on the complaint of Officer MAHONY.

ARCHIBALD M. CRAIG was arraigned before Alderman MOORE, yesterday, at the Tombs, on a charge of committing an assault upon and robbing MICHAEL CONNELLY, of No. 103 Chrystie-street. CRAIG was meeting a friend on his door when the prisoner and another man came up, knocked him down, and stole from him a watch and $20 in money. The prisoner was fully committed for trial. The confederate was not arrested.

Officer GRIER, of the Twenty-ninth Precinct, saw HENRY DUFFY acting in a suspicious manner early yesterday morning at the corner of Seventh-avenue and Nineteenth-street, and as DUFFY ran into an adjoining yard he was arrested. In the possession of the prisoner were found several ingenious burglar tools, and $600 in gold and other bonds, which he said he had stolen from the store of ALBERT RICH, at No. 366 Sixth-avenue. A padlock had been broken off a side door, and entrance thus obtained. When DUFFY was arraigned before Justice SHANDLEY at Jefferson Market he was fully committed for trial without bail.

J. THEODORICK GERRAN, of No. 105 East Thirteenth-street, caused the arrest of CATHARINE FRENIX, yesterday, on a charge of larceny. He had met the woman in the street and accompanied her to a saloon, where his wallet, containing $45, suddenly disappeared. Justice SHANDLEY held CATHARINE for trial.

ARMORED HELLERT was arraigned before Justice SHANDLEY yesterday on a charge of having assaulted WM. BALDOCK, and severely stabbing him in the groin and breast with a knife. As Mr. BALDOCK is in Bellevue Hospital and unable to appear in Court, the Magistrate took the affidavit of Officer WM. IRVING, of the Twentieth Precinct, who made the arrest, and had confronted the prisoner with his victim. He testified that BALDOCK had fully identified HELLERT as the assailant, and he was accordingly remanded.

JOHN CURRIE, a Canadian, aged forty-two, residing at No. 39 Oak-street, returned home, yesterday morning, intoxicated. After being there an hour or two, he dressed himself and went into a rear room, where a woman named MARY HAYNES was sleeping. He awoke MARY, with whom he was boarding, and began abusing her in an outrageous manner, with the intent of provoking a quarrel. The woman got up and was dressing herself with the intention of leaving the house, as she was afraid of CURRIE. The ruffian then attacked her with a large knife and stabbed her in the breast, jaw and left arm, all the wounds being ugly gashes. The assailant was arrested, and on being arraigned before Alderman MOORE, at the Tombs, was remanded for trial.

Officer MICHAL HARRIS, of the Fourth Ward, arrested BRYAN DORSEY, a laborer, for intoxication and disorderly conduct. DORSEY resisted arrest, and, drawing a revolver, attempted to shoot the policeman. DORSEY was finally overpowered, and Alderman MOORE held him for examination.

A few minutes before 1 o'clock yesterday morning, Mrs. ANN BRADY, aged fifty-four, of No. 487 West Forty-second-street, was shot by JOSEPH FARRELL, a young man residing next door to her. There had been some trouble between FARRELL and CHRISTOPHER FREISE, the proprietor of a lager-beer saloon at No. 455 West Forty-second-street, where both resided, and as FARRELL came out of the saloon in an intoxicated condition, he drew a revolver and fired at FREISE. Owing to the drunken condition the bullet missed its object, and struck Mrs. BRADY as she came out of the grocery next door. The missile passed through one of her thighs, and lodged in the muscles of the other limb. Before the Police heard of the affair, FARRELL managed to make his escape, and thus could not be found. The unfortunate woman was attended by a surgeon, who pronounced the wounds to be of a severe, though not fatal character. FARRELL is said to be a brother of the man of that name who took so prominent a part in the draft riots of 1863, and as he is well known, will probably be soon arrested.

An altercation occurred yesterday morning in Leggett's Hotel, Chatham-street, between HENRY HEITNER and MARY SWEENEY, both of whom are employed in the hotel. HENRY stabbed MARY in the thigh with a large fork, causing a severe wound. He was arrested, and being arraigned before Alderman MOORE, at the Tombs, was remanded for examination.

In the Yorkville Police Court yesterday, before Justice BIXBY, MICHAEL CURRAN, of No. 66 Elm-street, charged DAVID BRAUN, who keeps a soda-water establishment at the corner of Third-avenue and Twenty-eighth-street, with snatching a pocketbook containing $18 from him on Saturday afternoon. Mr. CURRAN went into BRAUN's place and asked for a glass of soda-water, which was given him. He took out the pocket-book to pay for the drink, when, as he alleged, BRAUN snatched it from him and refused to give it back. BRAUN was held in $800 bail to answer.

The Strawberry Season.

The strawberry season may be said to be at its height just now, and thousands of baskets of the ripe and luscious fruit are being every day disposed of. The fruit-stands in both the Washington and Fulton Markets are constantly surrounded by a crowd of anxious buyers, and the venders drive a thriving trade. The berries first received in this market come from Virginia, and these are followed by the crop from Maryland, and subsequently by those from New-Jersey and Delaware. These latter do not generally come on the market in great quantities until about the second week in June, the bulk of the berry crop bought previous to that time being the product of Virginia and Maryland cultivation. The raising of the strawberry is of late years exciting a much greater interest than it formerly did, and the promptness with which a good salable article of fruit will always find purchasers is leading many to pay special attention to raising it, and it proves to be a most profitable crop. The amount of money which is paid out annually during the season for strawberries in this City alone is not less than $600,000. The prices vary, of course, according to the character of the fruit offered for sale, and the earliness with which it is put upon the market. Today prices range from 25 to 45 cents per basket. As the season advances, and the supply increases, the price gets to be less and less, and the use of the berry becomes a rarity and ceases to be regarded as a luxury. The berries come into market in small baskets, packed in all sorts of crates. Some of these baskets are square, some round, while the New-Jersey berry is put up a very great deal sold in small common half-pint baskets. The Southern berries are put up generally in pint baskets, both square and round. The crop, this season, is abundant, said by the dealers in fruit to be the greatest that has been known in New-York for many years. Notwithstanding the great supply that has been put upon the market, consumers are anxious to get the fruit into their possession, and any one who visits the stands where the sales are made will be astonished at the big prices that are sometimes paid for the choicest qualities of berry. Although the stands are generally crowded with baskets early in the afternoon, by the time 7½ o'clock has arrived hardly a basket will be found unsold.

The morning business consists in wholesaling to the regular customers whose orders have been given in previously. The large dealers are generally fully employed during the earlier part of the day in shipping their goods. A very large proportion of these is sent to Boston, especially of the Southern berry, and enormous quantities are bought by hotel and restaurant keepers. When parties desire to buy, casually, half a dozen or more small baskets of berries, these are emptied into a larger one, on which a deposit is left by the purchaser, and means is thus furnished him for transporting his purchase. When this basket is returned to the dealer the deposit, fifteen cents, is paid back to the purchaser. The dealer is allowed by the grower, also, for the crates and baskets which he returns in good condition. The first installment of berries from New-Jersey was received on Saturday. The business is much larger, and far more capital is invested in it, take it all in all, than people generally imagine; and great as its proportions have become, every year adds to the traffic.

TEMPLE ISRAEL, BROOKLYN.

Celebration of the Festival of Pentecost—Interesting Confirmation Ceremony—Woman's Place in Judaism.

Yesterday forenoon the congregation worshiping in the Temple Israel, under the pastoral care of RAPHAEL D. C. LEWIS, Rabbi, met to celebrate the festival of Pentecost, in commemoration of the giving of the law to the ancient Hebrews, and to proceed to the annual confirmation of new members of the flock. This was the first annual confirmation that has been held in connection with this lately organized congregation. There were in all eleven candidates for admission—seven young ladies and four young gentlemen. The admission of women to an equal standing in the synagogue with men is a practice whose introduction has been owing to the Reformed School of Judaism, and to which the Orthodox section only give, as yet, a very partial adhesion.

The services commenced at 10 o'clock, with the usual festival prayers, after which the confirmation service was opened with the singing of the hymn "Oden Olam." The Rabbi then read the verses, one to seven, of the twelfth chapter of Ecclesiastes, beginning "Remember now thy Creator in the days of thy youth." The march from MEYERBEER's "Prophète" was next played, and the confirmants, who had been seated with their parents and friends, proceeded to the altar under the escort of the Marshals. The altar was tastefully decorated with flowers, and the lights in front of it were lit. The whole building was relieved by a profusion of floral wreaths, and generally presented a festive appearance. The confirmants having taken their places beside the altar, the Rabbi proceeded to ask them whether it was of their own free will that they were there to be confirmed. He continued by recapitulating the duties that they were to undertake. On his question being answered in the affirmative, he went on to bless them in the words: "Blessed be he who cometh in the name of the Lord, we bless you from the House of the Lord." A short address was then delivered to the confirmants, setting forth the trials and temptations of the world, and the insidious character of the inroads of sin. They were next asked how they expected to be able to withstand those trials. The replied that their faith was in God, and they believed that if they tried to be good and virtuous the Divine Being would not forsake them. After an appropriate exhortation to Divine reliance, the Rabbi called on them to invoke the Divine blessing on the vows they were to undertake. A beautifully simple, affecting and appropriate prayer was then offered up by Miss CARRIE EISENSTEIN on behalf of her fellow-confirmants. The Ten Commandments having been read, the festival service was here resumed, the Scroll of the Law was taken out of the Ark, and the proclamation of the Commandments recited in Hebrew from the twentieth chapter of Exodus, the confirmants both male and female, participating in the opening and closing benediction. After a reading in Hebrew from the fourth chapter of Habakkuk, and a prayer in English for the Government of the country, the Scroll was returned to the Ark. The confirmation hymn, written by Mr. FELIX ADLER, and beginning "Praise ye the Lord our Redeemer," was then sung, after which the Rabbi proceeded with the confirmation service, putting the confirmants through a severe test by many questions, which were answered individually, the answers embodying the entire principle and ideas of Reformed Judaism. Three test questions were here put, as follows: "Do you firmly believe in the existence and unity of the Supreme Being?" "Do you firmly believe in a Divine revelation, and in the Messianic mission of Israel?" "Do you firmly believe in the immortality of the soul, and the accountability of man to God for his actions on earth?" To each of these the confirmants collectively replied, "I do." They were then called upon to recite a confession of their faith, including three articles in which the foregoing ideas were somewhat amplified. This having been done, the Rabbi told them that from the manner in which they had answered his questions, he believed that they were honest in their convictions, and worthy of being confirmed. After dwelling impressively on the nature of the vow they had registered, he charged them in these words: "If your hearts fail you now, if there be the slightest doubt upon your minds as to the truth of the profession you have made, pause ere you bind yourselves to it forever, as sons and daughters of Israel, weighty of mind prepared to undertake their obligation." The requisite assent having been given, they were told to repeat a vow which would make them members of the Congregation of Israel forever. The audience then rose, and the confirmants took upon themselves the solemn obligation. The Rabbi then declared them confirmed in these words: "And now in the name of Almighty God, I declare you duly confirmed in the religion of our Fathers—the religion which, with the help of God and through the instrumentality of Israel, is destined to become the religion of the world. I acknowledge you as members of our race. I hail you by the honored title of Israelites: I acknowledge you as co-workers with us in our heavenly mission for the elevation of humanity: I welcome you as brothers and sisters in Israel, as children, servants of God, whose good and holy name we praise now and for evermore." The confirmants responded: "Holy, holy, holy is the name of the Highest, the whole earth is full of His glory."

The Rabbi next proceeded to deliver the confirmation sermon, based upon the prophecy of Isaiah, "The grass withereth and the flower fadeth, but the Word of our God shall stand for ever." He exhorted the confirmants to use well the season of their youth; telling them that it was only false religion which prohibited rational enjoyment, but warning them to beware of falling into that excess which alone was criminal. He also dwelt upon the advantage of education, and to pay less attention to personal adornment than to the study of the Word of God, which endured forever. He referred to the fact that in the Judaism of Moses and Isaiah woman found her true place and dignity, and that it was only from the corruption of late years that she had been degraded. He stigmatized the Judaism which taught that woman was inferior to man as "false, ungodly, and unworthy of the name of religion." He told his hearers that the Messianic mission of Israel devolved upon them, and concluded by an eloquent exhortation to live worthy of it.

Each confirmant then received a benediction, the Rabbi laying his hands on their heads and blessing them after the old and solemn formula.

The festival service was next resumed and continued by the recital of some of the Psalms, and concluded with a general benediction.

The services throughout were of a most impressive and affecting character, several of the audience being very deeply moved. A number of Christians from Brooklyn and New-York were present, among whom was Miss EDITH O'GORMAN, the escaped nun.

In the evening, at 8 o'clock, Mr. CAULFIELD, the regular organist, Mr. MORRIS ABRAHAMS, a talented amateur, presided at the instrument.

In the evening the newly-admitted confirmants, accompanied by their parents, called at the residence of Mr. LEWIS, No. 149 Dean-street, and one of their number, Master DORNELIS, presented the Rabbi with a pair of handsome silver goblets, bearing the following inscription: "A token of remembrance from the confirmation class to the Rev. R. D. C. LEWIS, Brooklyn, 1870." Mr. LEWIS made a suitable reply, and a few hours were very pleasantly spent by those present.

It was announced at the conclusion of the forenoon service that a meeting would be held in the Temple Israel this evening, to consider the distressed condition of their brethren in Roumania.

A Century of Universalism in America—Sermon by Rev. Charles F. Lee, at Plimpton Hall.

Rev. CHARLES F. LEE discoursed before the members of the Universalist Church at Plimpton Hall, yesterday morning, on "1770—1870; Or, A Century of Universalism in America," selecting the following text:

"Arise, shine; for thy light is come and the glory of the Lord is risen upon thee."—Isaiah lx., 1.

The reverend gentleman spoke of the feelings of joy and happiness with which all members of the Universalist Church welcomed its first Centenary. One hundred years ago next September, an English brig bound for New-York cast anchor in a little inlet off the Jersey coast. A fog arose during the night, and toward morning it became so dense that the vessel could not with safety proceed on its course. This was no unusual occurrence in itself, yet from that apparently slight incident has resulted a great and glorious event. On board that ship was the Apostle of Universalism, JOHN MURRAY, who was so persecuted as a heretic in his own land that he abandoned his avocation of a preacher, and resolved to bury himself forever in the fair young continent beyond the sea. In his apparently slight sweat the hand of God was plainly visible in the means He adopts for the propagation of His Church. MURRAY disembarked to ascertain the condition of the country of his future home, and meditating on his sad, unhappy life he approached a house in the forest, when a tall elderly man rose to greet him. This was THOMAS POTTER, rough and unlettered but noble of sentiment, generous of soul and full of godly emotions and godly endeavors. "Ah! friend," cried POTTER, "I am glad you have come; I have been expecting you a long time." MURRAY looked at him in wonder and knew not his meaning when the old sailor explained that he had built a meeting-house, but he had never found one to preach to his satisfaction. He was a believer in the redemption and he wanted a man to speak of Jesus Christ and his own salvation. Baptists, Presbyterians and Quakers had worshiped there, but they were too doubtful of Christ's love and did not realize his idea of the spirit of the Savior. But old POTTER was hopeful. One day he saw a ship at anchor and then his soul cried out that in that vessel was the person he had long expected—the only one who was to be the preacher in his house. This he explained to MURRAY, as he grasped his hand again and again in the exuberance of his joy. The latter doubted, and said his vessel would proceed on its course with the change in the wind, when old POTTER replied, "The wind will never change, Sir, until you have delivered to us the message from our God." MURRAY doubted, wavered, but finally acceded, and on the next Sunday, the 30th of September, 1770, was preached the first Universalist sermon ever preached in America. Thus was simple, indeed, in its beginning, but how grand in its result. His was an audience of unlearned and innocent hunters and farmers in all their primitive simplicity, and as he preached not partial salvation, but the God of love and redemption, he laid the foundation of that glorious church which is destined to be the future religion of this country. And now, after the lapse of one hundred years, their church was happy and prosperous, and promised still greater blessings for the future. It had flourished in spite of all difficulties; it had now one thousand churches, a million real believers, and several hundred preachers. What a grand results, and how inspiring in their efforts for the future. MURRAY, WINCHESTER and WHITEMORE had not toiled in vain. The reverend gentleman then referred to the great political events that occurred in this country for the past century; making particular reference to the revolution of 1776 and the recent civil war, and continued to say that the advent of Universalism to this country was an event second in importance to none. He admitted that all denominations were doing a noble work, but he confidently looked forward to the time when all would be united and believe in WINCHESTER's Confession of Faith—universal love and universal redemption. In conclusion the reverend gentleman counseled unitedness of action and determination as the only means of enabling them to celebrate their second centenary under the same happy circumstances with which they celebrated their first.

A SHIP ON FIRE.

Extensive Conflagration on the East River—Loss $150,000.

At 10¾ o'clock last night flames were discovered on board the Black Ball packet-ship West F. Stover, Capt. JAMES BRYANT, as she lay at her dock, foot of Beekman-street, East River. The fire originated in some unknown manner in the aft-hold, on the port side, among some 200 barrels of lard that had just been taken on board. Owing to the inflammable nature of this portion of her cargo, the flames gained rapid headway, and were in heavy volumes when the firemen arrived on the scene. So much space had been gained by the element that a second alarm was given and a new force of steamers called into requisition. The Police steam-boat Metropolitan, and the Fire steam-boat Andrew J. Fulton, were also notified of the fire, and in due time both vessels arrived and contributed their quota of powerful streams for the effort to quell the flames.

So rapid was the progress made by the firemen that the hold of the burning vessel soon began to fill, and the bulk of water became so great that the deserted ship began to sink at her moorings, and keel over toward the dock. By dint of hard work the fierce torrent of flame between decks was kept under control, and it seldom made its appearance in the open air, though the entire vicinity was completely darkened by the black smoke that was constantly issuing from the open hatchway. This rendered it quite hazardous for the Fulton ferry-boats to ply to and fro, and necessitated the use of extra strong lights to enable the pilots to make successful landings.

For over two hours the fire continued to retain partial possession of the ship, when the water thrown on board proved so great that at the time that she settled in the bottom of the slip, the flames being confined to the upper between-decks. The valuables belonging to the Captain and other portable property were taken possession of by the Insurance Patrol, and handed over to the custody of the Police. The loss on the ship and cargo is roughly estimated at $150,000, equally divided, and upon which there is considerable insurance. The vessel is well known in our mercantile marine, and arrived in port from Liverpool on the 17th ultimo, and was receiving cargo prior to another voyage to Europe. As we go to press the flames are still burning, though under complete control.

LOCAL NEWS IN BRIEF.

NEW-YORK.

The Fourth Ward Police yesterday discovered CHARLES COHEN, aged thirty, lying in front of No. 204 Front-street, in an insensible condition. Death occurred soon after his removal to the Oak-street Police Station, and the body was sent to the late residence of the deceased, No. 216 William-street, where Coroner FLYNN will hold an inquest.

The German singing society Schwaebischer Saengerbund of this City made a steam-boat excursion to Myers Grove, Staten Island, yesterday. They had the steamer Silas Baker, and Foster Sands, attached to the steam-boat F. Riley, from the foot of Barclay-street, in the forenoon, and returned to this City in the evening. Ladies and singers, music for dancing, and drinking-horns and everything else that could make the trip enjoyable, were on board.

The New-York General Singers' Union (Allgemeine Saengerbund) will hold their annual Whitmonday picnic at Jones' Wood today. There will be instrumental music on the grounds on the occasion, and the latter will be given by the singers of about twenty German singing societies of this City and neighborhood. The New-York Turnverein will also participate in the festival.

The Department of Public Parks announces that, if the weather be fine, there will be music by the Central Park Band at Mount Morris-square today from 6 to 8 P. M. Musical entertainments will also be given on Tuesday in Tompkins-square, from 6 to 8 P. M.; on Wednesday in Washington-square, from 6 to 8 P. M., and on Thursday in Madison-square, from 6 to 8 P. M., should the weather be fine.

ALBERINUS BAMBRICK, aged eighteen months, disappeared on Saturday morning from the residence of his parents in Eighty-first-street, near Fourth-avenue. Yesterday morning the child was found in a vacant lot in this vicinity, in an out-house, death having resulted from suffocation. Coroner KEENAN will hold an inquest today.

Messrs. TIFFANY & Co. have on exhibition the famous 100-guinea cup won by the yacht America in the regatta of 1851. It is well worth seeing. The yacht prizes made by the house for the coming season are the largest and most varied of any heretofore produced.

CORNELIUS POWER, aged twenty-nine, of No. 217 East Seventy-fourth-street, died suddenly yesterday from unknown causes. Mrs. JACKSON, coroner, also died suddenly at One Hundred and Twentieth-street and First-avenue.

JOHN LEDDY, aged five years, yesterday had a foot crushed by car No. 62, of the Bleecker-street line, while he was running alongside of it. The driver was arrested, but discharged as he was not to blame.

ISAAC TAYLOR, aged two years, died yesterday at No. 357 Tenth-avenue, from the effects of injuries sustained by falling into a basin of hot water which had been left on the floor.

FRANK NOON, aged twelve years, was caught in the draw at Harlem Bridge yesterday afternoon, and had an arm cut off at the shoulder.

The Union Base-ball Club defeated the Irving Club, at Central Park, on Saturday, by a score of 35 to 11.

BROOKLYN.

The Church of St. Mary of the Immaculate Conception, (Father MCDONALD's,) corner of Leonard and Remsen streets, Brooklyn, E. D., was well filled at the last mass yesterday. MOZART's Grand Twelfth Mass, with full orchestral accompaniment, was most superbly rendered by the choir, which consisted of the following artists: Mme. ANNIE REEDS, soprano; Miss CARRY and BALDWIN, contralto; Herr BURGHOFF, basso; and Herr ZOTT, organist. The young ladies of the Sodality, numbering some thirty or more, assisted in some of the passages, and altogether formed a very efficient chorus. In the Credo, the solo "Et Incarnatus" was most artistically executed by Miss BALDWIN. The other parts were likewise in keeping with the requirements of the piece.

About 2 o'clock yesterday morning JUDITH O'BRIEN, fifty-four years of age, residing at No. 205 Amity-street, fatally injured herself by jumping from the fourth story window of her dwelling. She was partially insane.

About 12½ o'clock yesterday morning an old gentleman named JOHN KRIENAN, while passing the junction of North Second and Fifth streets, was attacked by a gang of loafers and severely wounded about the head by blows from a slung-shot. His cries brought a policeman to his assistance, who pursued the assailants and captured one of them named JOHN GOERLEE. Dr. GREENER attended the wounded man.

About 9 o'clock last evening, on Wolcott-street, near Richard, FREDERICK BRADLEY stabbed RICHARD MCCORMACK in the back with a pocket-knife. They had been drinking together, and had quarreled about some unimportant matter. Dr. MCCAULLEY attended MCCORMACK, and had him taken to his home.

LONG ISLAND.

A large concourse of people assembled Saturday evening at the saloon of Mr. MEHRING, at Breslau, to celebrate the completion of the frame of the principal hotel of the City of Breslau, which was successfully raised on Saturday afternoon. The hotel is situated at the corner of Wellwood and Hoffman avenues; is to be three stories high, 62 by 34 feet, with an extension of the same height 36 by 20 feet. The parlors are to be 22 feet square, and the dining-room, 22 by 32 feet, will accommodate about sixty guests. A large observatory will be on the top, from which a view may be obtained of Great South Bay, Fire Island beach and the ocean beyond. The hotel will be finished July 1. A grand supper was provided by Mr. MEHRING, the proprietor of the hotel, and after a number of speeches and toasts, the affair wound up with a grand display of fire works.

Candidates for the Democratic nomination for Congress in the First Congressional District are being brought forward. Suffolk County papers advocate the claim of HENRY A. REEVES, the present incumbent, while most of the Queens County Democracy advocate the nomination of Hon. E. A. LAWRENCE, present Chairman of the Queens County Board of Supervisors.

A new station has been made on the Great Neck branch of the Flushing and North-side Railroad, about half a mile east of Little Neck Station. The new station takes the name of Little Neck, and the old station called by that name will be known as Douglaston, in honor of the owner of the yacht Sappho, who resides near that station. A depot has been erected by Mr. BENJ. WOOLSEY, at a cost of $1,800, 16 by 36 feet, two stories, with a 75 feet platform. All trains on the branch will stop at Little Neck, and only the 10½ and 6 P. M. trains from Hunter's Point, and 7:05 A. M., 1 and 7½ P. M. from Great Neck, stop at Douglaston.

The Good Templars of Connecticut have resolved on an excursion to Greenport on or about July 20. The Divisions of New-London, Toland and Windham counties, will leave New-London at 9½ A. M., on the steamer City of Lawrence. Those from Hartford County and towns on the Connecticut River will leave Hartford at 7½ A. M. in connection with those of the New-York and Hartford line, and the Divisions from New-Haven and Naugatuck Valley will leave New-Haven at 9 A. M., while Bridgeport Divisions, and those from western Connecticut, will leave Bridgeport at 8½ A. M. A mass Temperance Convention will be held in the afternoon and a return moonlight ride on the Sound in the evening. Great preparations are being made by the Greenport Lodges of G. T. and S. of T. to welcome the Connecticut excursionists.

More than a year ago, it was discovered that a clerk in the Flushing Post-office had been opening letters and abstracting money. The clerk was promptly arrested and bound over for trial. Last January the bondsman gave the accused up, fearing that he intended to run away. He has since been confined in Raymond-street Jail, Brooklyn.

The formal opening of the Sag Harbor branch of the Long Island Railroad will take place on Wednesday. A special train will leave Hunter's Point at 9 A. M. and return in the evening. GEORGE W. QUINTARD is Chairman of the Committee of Arrangements.

NEW-JERSEY.

About 11½ o'clock on Saturday night a Police officer, while patroling his beat in the neighborhood of Sussex-street, Jersey City, was accosted by a young man and woman, who seriously inquired for the reverend residence of Rev. Mr. MATSON, as they needed his sacerdotal services to be legitimately made twain of one flesh. They further informed the wondering officer that they had interviewed several clergymen within an hour with the same intent, but all declined owing to the inopportune hour, utterly regardless of the superstitious explanation of the bridegroom, who placed implicit reliance in the divination of an old crone, who, he said, had predicted unexpected woe on the nuptials if not solemnized before midnight. The policeman directed the quaint lovers to the residence of Rev. Mr. MATSON, an Episcopal clergyman on Sussex-street, where happily they found him and prevailed upon him to unite them till death doth them part.

WALTER SCOTT was arrested in East Newark, yesterday, on a warrant issued by Justice GREEN upon a charge of incest with his daughter, a girl eleven years old. The outrage was committed on Saturday evening in an open lot. The warrant was issued on the affidavit of the child, and SCOTT was committed to Hudson County jail yesterday at 3 P. M.

Mrs. ANNIE HOLMES, on Saturday night, either fell, or threw herself down, a steep precipice at Hudson City. She was found by policemen, and conveyed senseless to the Jersey City Hospital. There are no hopes of her recovery.

WILLIAM EAGLES, a lad ten years of age, was drowned on Saturday evening while bathing in the Passaic River, near REYNOLD's boat-house, in East Newark.

HENRY ZIMMERMAN, a resident of Union Hill, yesterday shot himself accidentally through the left hand while out on a shooting excursion.

The store of WM. J. ACHENBACK, on Springfield and South Orange streets, was burned on Saturday night. Loss, $5,000.
